This isn't "plagiarism." Clarke cited each source he relied on for each point of analysis. He didn't pass off others' analysis as his own.

Wisconsin sounds as corrupt as Washington DC

Badger Pundit @BadgerPundit · 28 abr

DOJ's not perfect, but current AG Schmel is far better than his predecessor. No corruption on his part; at most inattention to this case.

Trump will prevail @dsplcdNYGfn · 28 abr

Looking the other way = inattention = corruption... some people might see it that way.

Replying to @BadgerPundit @KFILE

The guy had 30 followers earlier. His last 150 followers are all from today, you idiot.

Badger Pundit

@BadgerPundit

Chroncling farce, folly, and fiasco in progressive politics since Feb. 2011. RT ≠ endorsement. I mute everyone who doesn't engage in good faith.

A couple of Solidarity Against Hate protesters burn a small American flag — "F--k America" — but stamp it out soon after.

You can disagree with Heather Heyer's politics, but it seems she was a decent person. Her parents have displayed astonishing poise.

Badger Pundit

@BadgerPundit

Chroncling farce, folly, and fiasco in progressive politics since Feb. 2011.
RT ≠ endorsement. I mute everyone who doesn't engage in good faith.

@BadgerPundit

Chroncling farce, folly, and fiasco in progressive politics since Feb. 2011. RT ≠ endorsement. I mute everyone who doesn't engage in good faith.

I imagine it is always a mistake to post incivility. Robust debate can be accomplished without hate. Can I get a cheesehead amen? ☺

Replying to @JillGeisler

OK. I'll rephrase. I imagine many liberals (and conservatives) have thought or said far worse after tragedies. Her mistake was posting it.

This was a casual comment exchanged w/ a FB friend. Harmless dark comedy if said orally. Her mistake was not realizing others might see it.

NOT THE ONION: @Harvard eliminates fine for overdue books -- too stressful for students!

thecrimson.com/article/2017/5

@VickiMcKenna

"We have witnessed firsthand the stress that overdue fines can cause for students,"

Beardsley continued.

"Eliminating standard overdue fines and standardizing loan periods across Harvard's libraries should help students focus on their scholarship, rather than worrying about renewing library books every 28 days in order to avoid fines."

Also this, last week

Badger Pundit @BadgerPundit

I stand by my prediction that this opposition to Moore by establishment Republicans will end up helping him. He'll win by a comfortable margin, be seated, and serve at least the remaining 3 years of the term (perhaps will retire or lose primary in 2020)

Well, Scott doesn't grok the South. Plus, Moore's a fighter. He would have won before Frankengroper/Conyers. Now contrast is not as stark and Moore looks acceptable to more people

Fair point. But even as a Wisconsinite who's only been to Alabama once, it seemed obvious to me that voters in the Deep South would resent an East Coast liberal newspaper going back decades to try to derail Moore at the last minute.

It seems the leftists at Laurier are repeating the mistakes of the leftists at Evergreen State, in overreacting to criticisms of their leftist insanity. What's next? Professor Greg Bird dropping F-bombs on colleagues who disagree with him, like Naima Lowe?

A few black person just wrote to me on Facebook "Damn You really out here ruining everything we have built" My response mansions now because we knelt down during the national anthem? Did all of our children get awarded diplomas and degrees because we wore shirts that said "black Lives Matter?". Did the police finally d'sappear and leave us to run the streets? Are we no longer living in the poorest neighborhoods, at the bottom of educational statistics, and at the top of murder ones? What exactly did my videos ruin? I'm at the edge of my seat awaiting your response.

Did yelling out "F*ck Trump" finally make black fathers come back to their families? Did my videos ruin that? Were they just about to marry the single mothers? Did we get released from prison because we all tweeted "free Meek Mill". Did welfare come to an end and did rich white

Good to see @Laurier president make clear Lindsay Shepherd did NOTHING wrong, and the only ones who erred were those who abused her in a meeting which never should have been held. Comment, Prof. @MatthewASears?

Could have setup the account before he met her, or while their relationship was less serious. That it was "active" in 2016 doesn't say much - did he just open it on his phone? Or was he matching people?

No idea why he's denying the account though, given those details.

None of it matters. Defamatory claim was that he was recently using Bumble to try to cheat on his wife of two months. If info reported by Buzzfeed is accurate, that's 100% false. People who w/ total recklessness accuse someone of attempted adultery should pay $100K minimum.

UPDATE: A representative from Bumble has confirmed that Pobosiec has been removed from the platform. His ouster is a continuation of the company's long history of banning users whose behavior goes against its core values, and has nothing to do with the size of his profile. In addition to reactive measures like today's banning, Bumble has teamed up with the Anti Defamation League to devise a list of keywords associated with hate groups that the company searches for to weed out certain users. After Ledford tagged the company on Twitter, Bumble confirmed that the account actually was Pobosiec's - and not someone posing as him before removing him.

This is second-hand information, reported by @FastCompany. Bumble has not stated how it could possibly confirm that the account's supposedly genuine Jack would not be taking the legal risk of reporting this to the FBI as fraud if he were lying.

Thank you. I found it in this article by @JoeBerkowitz on @FastCompany. archive is/pCuUB

if, as I think is true, this was a fake account, it would appear that Buzzfeed article says Bumble confirmed it was tied to his Facebook account. I've never used Bumble, but assuming it requires Facebook OAuth, that would require that troll had access to his Facebook account as well.

If this BuzzFeed account is true, then it seems @NathanBernard and @DeborahIndseyl are toast, exposed to paying big time punitive damages, because however the account got set up, it hasn't been used for TWO YEARS. Therefore Jack could not have been using it ... /1

Could have setup the account before he met her, or while their relationship was less serious. That it was "active" in 2016 doesn't say much - did he just open it on his phone? Or was he matching people?

No idea why he's denying the account though, given those details

Mooch, you're EXACTLY on target. @DavidFrum is a net drain on society. He's never created value for others exceeding the resources he's consumed. His whole life he's been living off daddy's money.

This is a tweet from a user named 'BP' who is replying to a tweet from @Scaramucci. The tweet is about David Frum, a conservative commentator, and is critical of him. The tweet is part of a conversation about David Frum's net worth and his relationship with his father, a wealthy businessman.

Well, to be fair, the letter simply stated that if the NRA didn't receive a response, it'd assume the candidate is hostile to 2nd Amendment rights. Seems reasonable to make that clear up front. Planned Parenthood could hardly be faulted for doing something similar.

From this family photo, it looks like he grew up with guns, so perhaps he currently has guns (he's at bottom right)

On his LinkedIn page, Bryson Syliboy claims he's "mature," and "works well under pressure." He works at Miller's Tap & Grill in Port Hawkesbury, Nova Scotia. Does his boss know he's threatening to beat up a college professor for something he wrote? linktr.ee/n/bryson-syliboy

@MillersTandG is the Twitter account for Miller's Tap & Grill, where Bryson Syliboy -- the guy threatening to beat up a college professor -- apparently works.
Here's more contact info. Phone number is (902) 625-0320. I hope someone alerts them to this gentleman's online conduct.

Update: Bryson Syliboy no longer has any connection to @MillersTandG. Per GM's e-mail to @ThinGrayLine01:
"Thank you for this email.
Unfortunately, Bryson has been laid off since late summer, so there isn't much I can do. I really appreciate you bringing it to my attention." /1

Note @ThinGrayLine01 DM'ed me to clarify that, in contacting the guy's boss, he was merely inquiring, and was not seeking to harm the guy. He specifically stated "I'm not asking for his firing" (I posted on this only after giving @ThinGrayLine01 option of not being mentioned)

This guy, Bryson Syliboy, is not joking. About 2000-2001, I think, ago he tweeted out a photo of his grandmother's cast iron skillet, threatening to use it against those opposing his view about indigenous children & residential schools. twitter.com/BSyliboy/status

He looks extremely muscular, and probably could kill someone with the skillet without too much effort. twitter.com/BSyliboy/status

From this family photo, it looks like he grew up with guns, so perhaps he currently has guns (he's at bottom right) twitter.com/BSyliboy/status

On his LinkedIn page, Bryson Syliboy claims he's "mature," and "works well under pressure." He works at Miller's Tap & Grill in Port Hawkesbury, Nova Scotia. Does his boss know he's threatening to beat up a college professor for something he wrote? linkedin.com/in/bryson-syli

@Miller'sTandG is the Twitter account for Miller's Tap & Grill, where Bryson Syliboy -- the guy threatening to beat up a college professor -- apparently works.

Here's more contact info. Phone number is (902) 625-0320. I hope someone alerts them to this gentleman's online conduct.

Update. Bryson Syliboy no longer has any connection to @Miller'sTandG. Per GM's e-mail to @ThinGrayLine01: "Thank you for this email. Unfortunately, Bryson has been laid off since late summer, so there isn't much I can do. I really appreciate you bringing it to my attention." /1

Assume central bankers now see this danger. If they secretly buy up, relatively early, say, 10% of existing Bitcoin, can't they periodically tank Bitcoin through mass dumps (followed by repurchases) -- thereby holding off hyperbitcoinization for many years?

I see your point, and agree w/ Pierre that if everyone is a rational actor, pumps might outweigh dumps. But my hypothesis is that coordinated dumping at key moments could deter many investors from ever entering this space, delaying widespread adoption of Bitcoin for years.

I disagree. Pre-law school writings can be vital to understanding a nominee's world view. Don't you recall how John Roberts's D.C. Circuit nomination was nearly derailed by his bizarre analysis of Daniel Webster, in his Harvard history thesis?

RS about what tax was owed. He just didn't pay what was owed. Still serious, but even good people can run into cashflow problems & skimp on tax payments

BP @BadgerPundit

I'm no #Avenatti fan, but "EVADED"? To me, "evaded" suggests hiding income or taking take deductions -- so it's unfair to say even Wesley Snipes "evaded" taxes, he just took a dubious legal position on bad advice. forbes.com/sites/robertwo/. #Avenatti just Generally speaking, IRS would see #Avenatti as a prime case for criminal prosecution. He didn't just skimp on some taxes, he quit filing, quit paying, and hid his income, while stiffing employees & pocketing profits. His Trust Fund payments were in the mid seven figures over due

A Federal Judge just put a man in prison in Chicago last week for the exact same acts but to a much lesser scale. I believe in that case the man owed less than $100k in unpaid taxes due and had 3 years of unfiled returns

BP @BadgerPundit · 27

Seems different than #Avenatti, who apparently never disputed he owed taxes during the period he didn't file, and ultimately paid up. Chicago guy is a frickin' HARVARD GRAD and RHODES SCHOLAR (and former congressman) who tried to evade tax on $500K. chicagotribune.com/news/local/bre.

Reynolds' most recent legal woes arose in June 2015 when he was charged with four misdemeanor counts alleging he failed to file tax returns from 2009 through 2012.

According to evidence in Reynolds' trial in September, he'd earned at least $500,000 during those years working as a consultant on business ventures in Africa on behalf of two prominent Chicago businessmen -- court-heavy developer Elze Higginbottom and businessman Willie Wilson, the owner of a medical supplies company who is running for Chicago mayor.

Reynolds argued that the money was for travel and other expenses, and therefore was not income and did not need to be reported to the Internal Revenue Service. Prosecutors, however, called that a "fairytale," taking Gettlerman through pages of Reynolds' bank statements showing how money was being spent after the checks were deposited.

Among the charges were sports tickets at Michigan State University, where his daughter was attending college, as well as charges to Chicago-area pizza restaurants, clothing stores and an online order for the "Hip Hop Abs" exercise program, the records showed.

After a four-day bench trial in September, Gettlerman convicted Reynolds on all four counts.

In a filing earlier this year, prosecutors asked for a stiff two-year prison sentence, noting not only Reynolds' lengthy criminal history but also his impressive resume as a lawmaker and businessman and educational background as a Harvard graduate and Rhodes scholar.

"Fraudulent at the end of the day, (Reynolds) knew better," the prosecution filing said. "He knew enough to know that he had earned substantial income as a consultant, and he knew enough to know that he should have filed tax returns reporting that income."

That's the guy and my memory is fallible. On another note, Avenatti's claim that CJ is the only source of payment may be plausible given that CJ has raised almost $500k in funds. They've only had limited court appearances so I can't imagine too many expenses yet.

BP @BadgerPundit · 10

But, as Barnes has pointed out, where did Avenatti get the $8 million he received shortly before taking on the Stormy Daniels case? twitter.com/BadgerPundit/s. Did someone agree to pay that if he headed up the Daniels work?

BP @BadgerPundit

@MichaelAvenatti, there's a report on @GatewayPundit, referencing @Barnes Law, that in December you swore your firm had only $412K in assets, but in February it paid off $8 million in debts. Was that money paid to your firm for taking Clifford's case?

Joey Lowe @JoeyLow · 8

That's literally the $8m question and one that I'm sure the Bankruptcy Court will want answered. At least I would imagine the Court would want to know where that money came from since so many creditors have been waiting for so long.

1 1 1

BP @BadgerPundit

@JoeyLow @Barnes Law 2

Look at Barnes's timeline for more, but basically the party engaged in the arbitration that was derailed by the involuntary bankruptcy petition (apparently filed by a Florida sockpuppet) was the only real creditor. Others were minor or illusory. Whole thing looks like a dodge.

Men are far more likely than women to ignore the pedestrian crossing and take a risky route across the street.

lebs.hbesj.org/index.php/lebs

The pedestrian crossing as a Microcosmos of society: plus.google.com/10104691640734

There is a large body of evidence from various disciplines, ranging from economic decision making to traffic behaviour, supporting differences in risk taking between men and women... These gender differences in risk taking have also been observed to play out in every day behaviour, such as in how we behave in traffic. Among other behaviours, men are less likely to wear a seatbelt than women. Men are also more likely to run red lights than women and, perhaps unsurprisingly, are more likely to be involved in (lethal) car accidents.

Here, we aim to replicate the finding on gender differences in every day risky behaviour among pedestrians crossing a busy road. In this particular situation, there is a risky but shorter route and a safer but longer route. We predict, that all else being equal, men will be more inclined to take the risky route than women...

558 pedestrians were directly observed and their use of a crossing near a Metro station in a large city in the North East of England was coded. Using logistic regression, we found evidence that women more inclined than men to use the crossing... Men were more inclined to take the risky route than women were (Odds Ratio: 3.28)... Our data further corroborated the existence of a gender difference in everyday risk taking in pedestrian behaviour. In line with Cobey et al., there was a sizable difference between men and women in risk taking behaviour. Our study thus successfully replicates previous work in this area, and confirms the existence of gender differences in every day behaviour such as crossing the road.

When Michael Cohen, competent lawyer, told @TheOnion it "goes way beyond defamation" to publish an piece by "Donald Trump" entitled "When You're Feeling Low, Just Remember I'll Be Dead In About 15 Or 20 Years": theonion.com/the-onion-has-... pic.twitter.com/PcEPftehfW

Beyond defamation, we find ... satire. I'd give him major props, however, if this was counter-satire

I'm one of the world's leading experts on fine distinctions between parody, satire, irony, etc. I'm confident this was both counter satire (countering the content of the satirical piece) and parody (parodying lawyers who send insane threatening letters) by @MichaelCohen212.

A portrait of a woman with dark, curly hair, wearing a patterned top, framed by a dark, textured border. The image is centered within a larger, dark frame that has a rough, hand-drawn appearance. The woman is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The background behind her is a plain, light color. The overall style is that of a physical photograph with a decorative border.

Re Lillian's Lillian's "feelings," Carlos asks "why something as simple as not getting served after a business announced it was closed has made her feel this way." Bottom line: "they point blank simple were closed and announced it before she entered"! /44

Assistant Professor of Psychology, University of Toronto

Dear Professor David Peterson and Professor David Frow:

We are writing to request the termination of Professor Jordan Peterson's appointment at the University of Toronto. We are writing to you as a group of students who are deeply concerned about the University's reputation and the safety of its students. We are writing to you as a group of students who are deeply concerned about the University's reputation and the safety of its students. Most people would not confess in a published paper that they've considered suicide, have taken psychiatric medications, and have been to at least 40 therapists to deal with hallucinations. Griffin Epstein does that on p

At IQ 150, men outnumber women by nearly 4 (80%) to 1 (20%). If that's a rough proxy for elite SC brainpower, 18% is what you'd expect.

Did the black death help make Europe great by wiping out large numbers of lower class persons?

A so, sp cy tit el

g-loaded.org/2019/11/20/the-

The Black Plague and European Intelligence

In the past, what little evidence we had of the Black Plague in Britain is, perhaps, due to a change in European genetic makeup. Geneticists have found that the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century. This is due to the fact that the Black Plague was a very deadly disease, and it killed a large number of people. This is why the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century.

The Black Plague lasted for a few years and in that time it killed about 30-60 percent of the European population. (Benedictow, 2005). It is believed that the Black Plague was a very deadly disease, and it killed a large number of people. This is why the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century.

It is not clear how the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century. It is possible that the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century because of the Black Plague. It is also possible that the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century because of other factors.

The story may follow like this: the Black Plague just very wipes out the bottom half of the population. Because that one does have a small chance to elaborate more on the genetic makeup of the population. It is possible that the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century because of the Black Plague. It is also possible that the genetic makeup of the population in Europe today is different from the genetic makeup of the population in Europe in the 14th century because of other factors.

Black Death was helpful, sure — but don't overlook evidence that the death penalty then made Europe even greater by removing the worst of each generation before they reproduced, producing a genetic advantage over other continents.

ary game theory, and conflict situations. A mild degree of unpredictability in your behavior can help you to protect yourself in situations of conflict. Say you always have the same threshold of reactions. You take a set level of abuse, say seventeen insulting remarks per week, before getting into a rage and punching the eighteenth offender in the nose. Such predictability will allow people to take advantage of you up to that well-known trigger point and stop there. But if you randomize your trigger point, sometimes overreacting at the slightest joke, people will not know in advance

And, of course, no amount of me agreeing with liberals and Never-Trump conservatives in their criticisms of Trump as a horrible person can quell their anger at my honest opinion that his 2016 opponent was an even worse person, and danger to the republic.

Even if he fails to win the Democratic nomination, Mike Bloomberg could spend up to $1 billion to defeat Trump. Is that a necessary evil? An unalloyed good? An opportunity to consider serious campaign finance reform and its alternatives? I discuss here dorfonlaw.org/2020/01/mike-b/.

In this context, despite being a Trump supporter from Day 1 (as the only hope to beat Hillary, a greater evil), I think a very good thing. Because of his media mastery and incumbency, Trump has gotten billions in free media. Bloomberg helps even the contest. More info is better.

A horrible connection if it pans out: On Dec. 30, Trump learned what Bolton's book would say. Bolton has been pushing war with Iran for years, Iran's General Soleimani was in US sights for years. Trump suddenly ordered his assassination on Jan. 3, four days after seeing the book.

Individual and Systemic Risk

Nathan Nicholas Taleb^{†} and Joseph Normand^{}
^{*}New England Complex Systems Institute, [†]School of Engineering, New York University

Precautionary decisions do not scale. Collective safety may require excessive individual risk avoidance, even if it conflicts with an individual's own interests and benefits. It may require an individual to worry about risks that are comparatively insignificant.

Assume a risk of a multiplicative viral epidemic, still in its early stages. The risk for an individual to catch the virus is very low, lower than other ailments. It is therefore "rational" to panic (read: immediately and as a priority). But if she or he does not panic and act in an ultra-conservative manner, they will contribute to the spread of the virus and it will become a severe source of systemic harm.

Hence one must panic: individually (i.e. produce what seems to be exaggerated response) in order to avoid systemic problems, even where the immediate individual payoff does not appear to warrant it.

This happens when the systemic risk is small to the individual but dominates in all, while an individual's other idiosyncratic risks dominate her or his own life. The risk of car accident may be greater for an individual, but smaller for society.

Under such conditions it becomes selfish, even psychopathic, to act according to what is called "rational" behavior: to make one's own immediate rankings of risk conflict with those of society even genuine risks for society. This is similar to other tragedies of the commons, except that there is life and death.

In addition, there is a tradeoff short-term vs. long-term for idiosyncratic risk. Over the long run, there is convergence between idiosyncratic and systemic your risk rises if all others are infected and the risks of survival from other diseases drop.

For example, during a pandemic that usually spares young, healthy individuals, an independent emergency that would typically be routine may become unresolvable because of lack of resources. Further, in conditions of severe societal breakdown, many additional risks will emerge for all agents that can't be reduced to the initial short-term risk of infection to the individual.

In the current COVID-19 outbreak, such effects can be observed by a complete inundation of hospitals and their ICUs as local outbreaks take hold. This and other less visible thresholds change the dynamics of the pandemic, as they are exceeded, initially small risks become amplified and produce novel and unanticipated risks as the contagion makes impacts system-wide.

For these reasons, the prudent and ethical course of action for all individuals is to enact systemic precautions at the individual and local scale. The breakdown of scale-separation that a multiplicative contagion induces unroots the individual to the collective, making everyone both a potential bearer and source of risk.

Stacy, you're wrong to mock what you see as an overreaction. If we don't wipe out the virus in the next couple of months, 1000s, maybe 10s of 1000s, will die due to shortage of intensive care equipment. It's basic math.

This is the way to do it — point is to blame the current Chinese regime to try to undermine its power in the world, and encourage it to act more responsibly in the future. Nothing racist about that; we'd do the same if virus had originated in Russia.

Liz Cheney @LizCheney

We must never forget: We are in the midst of a pandemic lockdown today because the Chinese Communist regime cared more about suppressing information than suppressing a virus. No doubt. Simple solution is a one sentence amendment to existing law. Any publicly traded social media company keeps section 230 immunity as long as they comply with First Amendment standards as if they were a governmental entity, when acting in the capacity of a publisher.

This is the force that lynches, drags people behind trucks, that beheads. It begins with surrender to the mob. It is a drug that makes people feel justified as they rob others of life. It is close kin to the force that knelt on George Floyd's neck. It won't stop, and it must.

What America needs to do is treat blacks as human being with free will who, when they make good choices enjoy the benefits and when they make bad choices experience the consequences.

Instead, The Establishment views blacks as our Sacred Cows, above criticism, but beneath agency.

I think the trouble is that it's just too insulting to the pride of a people to see such dramatic disparities between their own group's success and that of others. It's inevitable that they'd want to be shielded from that, and nice people will oblige

We've been trying for c. 55 years to shut down accurate depictions of urban reality to avoid hurting the fragile feelings of blacks, but have urban realities changed much despite all this effort to socially construct a fantasy of blacks as equally law-abiding?

I fear William will be publicly heckled, on campus.

Silly concern? Remember it happened to the Harvard Law dean 4 year ago, when emotion wasn't running nearly as high as it is now

"NIXON ESQUE" Since WI requires at least ONE PARTY to consent to recording a conversation & @GovEvers claims he didn't know the call between @SenFitzgerald and @SpeakerVos was being SECRETLY RECORDED, it seems Evers' staff would be in violation of the LAW.

Law students around the country should get busy and find statues, plaques, paintings, buildings, etc., at law schools that in any way commemorate any judge or lawyer who ever did or said anything now deemed politically incorrect.

So it took a white guy with a bat, and a female cop, to rescue the cop who was beaten up by these lawless thugs. Unless we want to devolve into tribalism, there has to be a line drawn now. Zero tolerance for attacks on cops.

Threatening suicide if somebody states an opinion you dislike. Always a solid go-to move for a normal and perfectly healthy activist movement that is definitely not a cult

Jonathan take a sec. I listen to people week in week out on the edge of suicide. It can be for many reasons, someone saying you don't exist or not worth existing is an all too familiar one. You may not agree on some's tactics but vulnerable people shouldn't be dismissed

If you get defensive when someone explains white privilege to you, then you suffer from not knowing enough yet. There's no shame in that, but there is a lot of shame in denying the oppression of black people in order to serve whites better in this country.

Heg's regiment lost more than 100 men. His horse was shot out from under him and his general called him "the bravest of the brave." In February 1863 Heg was put in command of the entire brigade and pursued retreating Confederate troops through Tennessee, briefly into Alabama, and across the state line to Chickamauga, Georgia.

Death at Chickamauga

At Chickamauga, Georgia, 10 miles south of Chattanooga, the Confederates made a stand. On September 19-20, 1863, Heg's brigade was outnumbered and the 15th Infantry again lost more than 100 soldiers.

MADISTAN: Among other actions, rioters busted into a private condo complex, stole a tow truck, tried to force entry into State Capitol, set the muni building on fire, beat the sh*t out of a Dem senator, tore down the "Forward" statue & tossed an abolitionist statue into the lake.

group initially marched, blocked intersections, and obstructed driveways. As the group's behavior escalated, they entered a private condominium building and surrounded a towing vehicle (requiring the driver to abandon the vehicle).

The group later moved to the Capital Square and removed two statutes from the Capital grounds (Lady Forward and Hans Christian Heg), and broke windows in a number of buildings. Windows at the City County Building were broken, and a Molotov cocktail was thrown into the building. The group went on to also attempt to force entry to the State Capital building. OC spray was deployed from within the State Capital building to repel individuals who were attempting to force entry.

Worth noting that many negative interactions between police and the black community occur in the context of enforcing/punishing petty infractions in Democrat-run cities that use police to raise money for municipal budgets. The problem is the people running the place, not the cops

Absolutely essential point. And a key reason municipal budgets are under such stress, leading to "policing for profit," is that Democrats are in thrall to public-employee unions, who suck up a vast amount of resources that are needed for essential public services.

No one is covering this! MPD command telling cops to STAND DOWN THIS WAS PLANNED--access to CCB was CLOSED OFF by the rioters around 5pm. Police KNEW the CCB would be firebombed. That's a FEDERAL CRIME. They did NOTHING. Cops were prohibited from using gas. READ THIS. SHOCKING.

Some information from last night

Extra police resources were sent home early last night.

An officer received a citizen report that individuals were planning to firebomb the CCB.

This information was immediately relayed to the off-site command post but no action was taken.

Officers were told not just to stand down, but to avoid the area completely.

The mob approached the CCB. Officers requested permission to utilize gas on the crowd to back them up. The command post repeatedly denied their requests.

A firebomb was thrown into the CCB. Officers heard glass break, smelled the smoke and reported it to the command post. Still no action was taken.

The fire spread rapidly and the building was evacuated. Dispersers escaping had to pass through fire and smoke. This resulted in a substantial disruption of emergency services in the heart of the county.

USP Dispersers responded at great risk to their own lives, but put the fire with fire extinguishers, likely saving the lives of hundreds of people including juveniles and homeless people in the IRC and jail.

A fire investigator examining the scene remarked it was only by the "Grace of God" and the action taken by dispersers that the entire building didn't go up in flames.

Officers working inside the CCB armed themselves with rifles from the armory, held the mob back through they believed they would have had to begin shooting people to save their own lives.

Officers are furious their commanders are not allowing them to act. They believe their lives are being endangered by their commanders' inability to make decisions or willingness to take action. Many are calling for a formal grievance and investigation of the commanders.

Many officers have stated they have been conditioned to the overall command of the department and are ready to walk off the job. They are standing firm only because of the other officers who stand along side them.

No one is covering this! MPD command telling cops to STAND DOWN. THIS WAS PLANNED--access to CCB was CLOSED OFF by the rioters around 5pm. Police KNEW the CCB would be firebombed. That's a FEDERAL CRIME. They did NOTHING. Cops were prohibited from using gas. READ THIS. SHOCKING.

Some information from last night

Extra police resources were sent home early last night

An officer received a citizen report that individuals were planning to firebomb the CCB

This information was immediately relayed to the off-site command post but no action was taken

Officers were told not just to stand down but to avoid the area completely

The mob approached the CCB. Officers requested permission to utilize gas on the crowd to back them up. The command post repeatedly denied their requests

A firebomb was thrown into the CCB. Officers heard glass break, smelled the smoke and reported it to the command post. Still no action was taken

The 911 center had to be evacuated. Dispatchers escaping had to pass through fire and smoke. This resulted in a substantial disruption of emergency services to the rest of the county

DCSO Deputies responded at great risk to their own lives to put out the fire with fire extinguishers, likely saving the lives of hundreds of people including juveniles and inmates housed in the JFC and jail

A fire investigator examining the scene remarked it was only by the Grace of God and the fast action by deputies that the entire building didn't go up in flames

Officers working inside the CCB armed themselves with rifles from the armory. Had the mob broken through they believed they would have had to begin shooting people to save their own lives

Officers are furious their commanders are not allowing them to act. They believe their lives are being endangered by their commanders' inability to make decisions or unwillingness to take action. Many are calling for a formal grievance and investigation of the commanders

Many officers have stated they have zero confidence in the overall command of the department and are ready to walk off the job. They are standing firm only because of the other officers who stand along side them

Journalism Ethics question: you interview someone involved in a college protest. They contact you three years later & say you misrepresented them. After you show that's not the case, that the protest was based on lies, they ask to be anonymized.

What's the right thing to do?

Do nothing. Don't remove any identifying information, but don't highlight your past coverage -- wouldn't be fair to punish them for asking you to anonymize them.

BUT, if they attack you, anonymously, then out them.

I tend to agree. Madison developers/businesses have spent great resources and made great strides boosting development downtown. For what? To create a lovely, space to be occupied by lawless vagrants, thugs and rioters.

I feel bad for Madison's downtown & State St businesses but it's really time for them to leave and find new locations. By now they must understand that as long as Conway is mayor, Mahoney is sheriff and Evers is gov, that not one of them will protect or care about the livelihoods

Very disappointing. But the upside of the current situation, in which many Republicans seek to safeguard their futures by abandoning a ship they perceive is sinking, is that if and when @realDonaldTrump is reelected, we will have an identifiable core of solid conservatives.

June 1, on I-676 in Philadelphia, police used tear gas and pepper spray against nonviolent protesters. They cornered some onto a highway and continued using force.

We analyzed dozens of videos, talked to witnesses, and reconstructed the incident.

It looks like the protesters are totally at fault for their own injuries because they intentionally blockaded an interstate highway. This should serve as a lesson never to walk onto an interstate highway, for any reason!

 One of the guys admits that those who left as soon as the cops showed up had no problem escaping. The others were foolish not to leave immediately. I'm not happy some people were injured, but the bottom line is they could have avoided the injuries by leaving the scene

In the current environment, systemic racism has become a pseudo-religious concept, an invisible yet malevolent force that torments the oppressed from within society's institutions. As such, failure to declare sufficient fealty to efforts opposing it provide a ready cudgel with which the mob can denounce anyone who disputes the febrile excesses of social justice activism.

Turner 29, resigned from Kindness after the company's Black Lives Matter posts, criticizing Kindness for what she termed "performative activism" meaning that Kindness touted the movement on social media but didn't do enough in real life to expand its community beyond white culture. She also pointed out a lack of diversity on the company's board of directors, which until this year, was all white.

Turner also posted a video to her blog, railing against the former CEO's tears as well as Harrington's expression of "sadness" regarding her resignation.

"The weaponizing of sadness and tears is infuriating," Turner said in her viral video. "It is one of the more insidious factors of white supremacy and whiteness. And it is used as a tool and as a tactic to make me feel, in this Black body that I have done something inherently wrong to bring this sadness upon you."

Turner, 29, resigned from Kindness after the company's Black Lives Matter posts, criticizing Kindness for what she termed "performative activism" — meaning that Kindness touted the movement on social media but didn't do enough in real life to expand its community beyond white culture. She also pointed out a lack of diversity on the company's board of directors, which until this year, was all white.

Turner also posted a video to her blog, railing against the former CEO's tears as well as Harrington's expression of "sadness" regarding her resignation.

"The weaponizing of sadness and tears is infuriating," Turner said in her viral video. "It is one of the more insidious factors of white supremacy and whiteness. And it is used as a tool and as a tactic to make me feel in this Black body that I have done something inherently wrong to bring this sadness upon you."

Robert Nozick would absolutely love this scene of the Crips supplying protection services against Antifa! plato.stanford.edu/entries/nozick...

Moreover, the individualist anarchist asserts—and Nozick is strongly disposed to agree—that shoppers for any sort of service will do best when there is a competitive market in the supply of that sort of service. Competition among good-willed providers of the service of rights protection will induce lower prices and or higher quality rights protection—including protection against outlaw agencies that seek to assist or protect rights violators. The interest of good-willed purchasers of rights protection in non-violent dispute resolution will press competing suppliers of rights protection to join in agreements that more sharply define the boundaries of their clients and establish procedures for resolving disputes among them. Any protective agency that is not part of a network of established conflict diminishing agreements and resolution procedures will be at a huge competitive disadvantage. Nozick refers to the resulting network as the dominant protective association, and he treats the question of whether the minimal state can arise without violating rights as a matter of whether such a dominant protective association can develop into a minimal state without violating rights.

Important thread. Vexing situation, also because so many judges in fed & state courts are sincerely interested hiring more diverse clerks. This benefits the judiciary all 'round. So we need to work on this problem for the benefit of the justice system, as well as our students.

I'm not getting into the reasons for it (not arguing that minorities at a law school have less native ability than average for the school), but we know that less privileged minorities tend to cluster at the bottom of their class in terms of grades. That hurts clerkship chances.

Perhaps also point out Lincoln's speech in 1858 acknowledging that northerners were no better, morally, than southerners, and they would seek to preserve (and extend) slavery if it were already entrenched in the north.

mason.gmu.edu/~zschrage/hist1 ...

Before proceeding, let me say I think I have no prejudice against the Southern people. They are just what we would be in their situation. If slavery did not now exist among them, they would not introduce it. If it did now exist amongst us, we should not instantly give it up. This I believe of the masses North and South. Doubtless there are individuals on both sides, who would not hold slaves under any circumstances; and others who would gladly introduce slavery anew, if it were out of existence. We know that some Southern men do free their slaves, go North, and become tiptop Abolitionists, while some Northern ones go South, and become most cruel slave-masters.

When Southern people tell us they are no more responsible for the origin of slavery than we, I acknowledge the fact. When it is said that the institution exists, and that it is very difficult to get rid of it, in any satisfactory way, I can understand and appreciate the saying. I surely will not blame them for not doing what I should not know how to do myself. If all earthly power were given me, I should not know what to do, as to the existing institution. My first impulse

Yes. I've long regretted having missed out on the excitement of the 1960s, and even more, the French Revolution. It's looking like we're moving into a decade that will drawn on elements of both. How grand!

There needs to be a massive wall around the statues, to keep out the anarchic mobs. 1000s of years from now, a future civilization will ponder its meaning, just as today we do with Stonehenge.

Edison and Jackson are deserving.

Borlaug is in the National Statuary Hall in the Capitol, where each state gets 2 statues. But those get changed pretty frequently. E.g., Utah is taking out Philo T. Farnsworth (who invented TV more than any other single person) and replacing him with some lady politician

Only chance Princeton has of stopping school from spiraling down into an Evergreen State is to adopt approach of U. Chicago in 1962 -- respectful debate is fine, but physical disruption of university will lead to suspension & maybe criminal charges.

chicagomaroon.com/article/2015/1 ...

At last, the sit-in came to a sudden halt on February 5, two weeks after it began. The administration had just released a statement offering joint discussions about integration with members of CORE, SG, the faculty, and several community organizations. While students deliberated their response to the proposal, administration sent a notice warning the students that they had been violating the administration's rule of four protesters on the fifth floor at a time. Administration demanded students leave the floor immediately and report to Dean Netherton, as "...the failure to do so will result in the automatic suspension of the student's registration in the University."

"Black Lives Matter" is an evil, hateful, racist message. Every right thinking person, of any color, should reject this movement's totalitarian "social justice" ideology.

Steve Stewart-Williams @SteveStuW

"Not a single person expressed any doubt that black lives do, indeed, matter. They are worried about being expected to affirm a very specific conception of anti-racism that includes a specific conception of the world and specific methods for diagnosing racism."

Nope. You're wrong. BLM is asking for equality. If you are against BLM, then you are implicitly endorsing white supremacy.

it absolutely sickens me that somebody with such a wrong-headed understanding of justice and inequality graduated from law school.

Hey, you should do some research ("do the work") -- read up on BLM mission statement, and "critical race theory." BLM's official goal is to destroy the family and deprive communities of color of police protection that law-abiding blacks are begging for.

Blacks are already much safer than whites in terms of their risk of being killed by cops. You are apparently ignorant of the Harvard professor (who happens to be black) who concluded they're 25% less likely to be killed. That's safe enough.

The tiny handful of blacks who are killed by white cops (usually while acting wrongly, resisting arrest or attacking the cop) is insignificant compared to the 1000s of blacks a year killed by other blacks -- 94% of blacks are killed by other blacks!

No, these are not their stated goals. These are someone's interpretation of their goals. I think their goals are actually quite simple to understand. They want black lives to matter as much as white lives, especially as it pertains to treatment by police.

I bet you've never even taken a few minutes to read anything written by Heather Mac Donald -- you're just totally ignorant about what the vast majority of black people actually want, which is to live in safety. cityjournal.org/repudiate-the

Policing today is driven by crime data and community demands for help. Victim reports send police disproportionately to minority communities because that is where people are most being hurt by violent street crime. Blacks between the ages of ten and 43 die of homicide at thirteen times the rate of whites, according to the CDC. In New York City, blacks make up 73 percent of all shooting victims, though they are 23 percent of the city's population. In Chicago in 2016, there were 4,300 shooting victims, almost all black. Among the two dozen victims under the age of 12 was a three-year-old shot on Father's Day who is now paralyzed for life and a ten-year-old shot on Labor Day whose pancreas and spleen were ripped apart. In Minneapolis, last September, a two-year-old girl was shot in her backyard at 1 A.M., another Minneapolis two-year-old, LeVonte King Jason Jones, was killed in broad daylight in 2016 by gang rivals of his mother's boyfriend. These are the realities that police commanders in urban areas face daily.

But community requests for help also determine police deployment, and the most urgent requests come from the law-abiding residents of high-crime neighborhoods. An elderly cancer amputee in the Mt. Hope section of the Bronx described to me her fear of going into her building lobby, since it was so often occupied by trespassing youth hanging out and selling drugs. The only time she felt safe was when law enforcement was there: "As long as you see the police, everything's A-OK. You can come down and get your mail and talk to decent people." This vulnerable senior citizen longed for the surveillance watchtower that the local precinct had erected on her block several summers earlier to deter shootings. Anti-police activists would undoubtedly condemn such a watchtower as a weapon of the oppressive police state. To the cancer amputee, it was a literal godsend. "It was the peacefullest summer ever. I could sit outside at night

Pretty much everyone hates Marxists, except Marxists. Because it's an ideology -- a failed one, which has killed something like 100 million people in the past century -- and it's not race based, it's pretty much the only group you can mock and ridicule with impunity. 📄😏

"Black Lives Matter" is an evil, hateful, racist message. Every right thinking person, of any color, should reject this movement's totalitarian "social justice" ideology.

Steve Stewart-Williams @SteveStuW

"Not a single person expressed any doubt that black lives do, indeed, matter. They are worried about being expected to affirm a very specific conception of anti-racism that includes a specific conception of the world and specific methods for diagnosing racism

I bet you've never even taken a few minutes to read anything written by Heather Mac Donald -- you're just totally ignorant about what the vast majority of black people actually want, which is to live in safety. cityjournal.org/repudiate-the

Policing today is driven by crime data and community demands for help. Victim reports send police disproportionately to minority communities because that is where people are most being hurt by violent street crime. Blacks between the ages of ten and 43 die of homicide at thirteen times the rate of whites, according to the CDC. In New York City, blacks make up 73 percent of all shooting victims, though they are 23 percent of the city's population. In Chicago in 2016, there were 4,300 shooting victims, almost all black. Among the two dozen victims under the age of 12 was a three-year-old shot on Father's Day who is now paralyzed for life and a ten-year-old shot on Labor Day whose pancreas and spleen were ripped apart. In Minneapolis, last September, a two-year-old girl was shot in her backyard at 1 AM; another Minneapolis two-year-old, LeVonte King Jason Jones, was killed in broad daylight in 2016 by gang rivals of his mother's boyfriend. These are the realities that police commanders in urban areas face daily.

But community requests for help also determine police deployment, and the most urgent requests come from the law-abiding residents of high-crime neighborhoods. An elderly cancer amputee in the Mt. Hope section of the Bronx described to me her fear of going into her building lobby, since it was so often occupied by trespassing youth hanging out and selling drugs. The only time she felt safe was when law enforcement was there: "As long as you see the police, everything's A-OK. You can come down and get your mail and talk to decent people." This vulnerable senior citizen longed for the surveillance watchtower that the local precinct had erected on her block several summers earlier to deter shootings. Anti-police activists would undoubtedly condemn such a watchtower as a weapon of the oppressive police state. To the cancer amputee, it was a literal godsend. "It was the peaceiest summer ever. I could sit outside at night.

Nobody is behaving as if white lives don't matter. "White lives matter" is not an argument that needs to be made.

I've been to some BLM protests, and I've frequently seen signs that claim "ALL LIVES WON'T MATTER UNTIL BLACK LIVES MATTER." Do you disagree with that statement?

After 10 months of no progress on filing for divorce I requested my retainer back and Kate kept $750 of it. She repeatedly requested the same paperwork over and over even calling me once an hour after I left her office for the same documents I had just provided. She couldn't get even my name right continuously sending me emails and adding wrong names/spelling to my drafted documents (which never went anywhere!). My divorce was straight forward and uncontested (the most clean-cut divorce with no fighting between myself and my ex-husband. We simply wanted the paperwork written and filed correctly. I considered going to small claims court to obtain the $750 she kept but didn't want to deal with her anymore. After those wasted 10 months I hired another atty and my divorce was filed within 2 weeks. I would not recommend Ms. Willmore to anyone.

I recently checked out the Ramble. It looked like the rest of the park, nothing special. Christian Cooper violated a basic civic norm, and acted weirdly, in playing vigilante birder. He was the aggressor. A guy DOES NOT confront a woman he doesn't know.

everydaysociologyblog.com/2011/12/encoun

There is a norm of anonymity which governs behavior in public between strangers. Normally strangers quickly glance at each other and then look away. Through this ritual, which sociologist Erving Goffman calls "civil inattention," we demonstrate that we recognize the other person's presence, are not seeking a sustained interaction, and have no hostile intention.

The Dictionary of Critical Social Science defines "civil inattention" this way:

A norm of mass market societies which requires one carefully avoid interaction with others physically present. If the others are part of a social base, then civility would be required, if others are nonpersons, then one can be uncivilly inattentive, i.e., one can stare, push, look through, speak through or talk about others in that presence.

The norm is that strangers do not talk to one another. Typically at about eight to ten feet from one another we have a very brief exchange of eye contact, and then avert our eyes. In making eye contact, we acknowledge that we see the other person, and that we will not invade their territory. In averting our gaze, we display our lack of recognition of the other and our unwillingness to become more familiar. This type of facework creates a climate of minimal security, thus helping to keep down feelings of anxiety or fear. The ritual of civil inattention seems to suggest "you can trust me...I am not going to attack you."

Cooper could have called the police. Instead, he decided to confront a white woman, and video her, obviously hoping that what did happen would happen. We know he wouldn't have confronted a black woman. We know if he were white, and she black, he'd be the one in trouble. Sick.

Ms Cooper broke the rules by letting her dog off leash and her harmed the dog by strangling him

Central Park Dog Rules

Dogs must be on a leash (no more than six feet long) at all times, except in dog runs and designated off-leash areas at the prescribed times. You must pick up after your dog and dispose of the waste in containers provided throughout the park. You must prevent your dog from chasing birds, squirrels, and other animals.

It was never her intent to call the police and make any false charge against a black man. Only because he weirdly STOOD THERE, even as she called police, did she start saying stuff about how she felt threatened by a black man, to try to SCARE HIM INTO LEAVING! /2

Key here is intent. Christian Cooper weirdly started this whole thing by confronting a woman he didn't know, in a secluded setting. All she wanted to do was to get him to leave her alone. She said what she said to get him to STOP HASSLING HER, not to get him cited by cops. /3

Women have earned more Bachelors Degrees than men annually since 1982 (38 years). They have earned more graduate degrees annually than men since 1987 (33 years). By 2006 women annually earned more Doctorate degrees than men (14 years).

Yeah, but equality won't be achieved until women earn more degrees than men in all fields, including STEM fields.

Only when everyone recognizes that women are better than men in every field will women finally be equal.

We could largely accomplish this indirectly, using market forces, if the feds made colleges guarantee, say, a third of all federally issued loans — they would stop enrolling humanities majors, who have trouble paying back loans.

Scott's more rigorous point is that no one has done a study of police brutality cases in which one controls for the BEHAVIOR of the person confronted by the police, thus there's zero proof that blacks and whites who behave similarly are treated differently.

He also says that the vast majority of whites, including the "allies" of the blacks involved in this movement, are lying when they claim to think that cops are systematically targeting blacks for abuse, just because they're black. That's perhaps his most interesting point.

 Look up eye witness accounts. they first rammed protestors which is how one was knocked off of his scooter leaving it front of the crosswalk causing the block. the woman is then quoted by many stating she is going to drive through them. she then drives through them.

It sounds like the protestors were determined to block the street, to prove they're "our streets!," and the woman made clear she was going to drive, and protestors had at least a few seconds to get out of the way. And they didn't.

The problem is that a percentage of citizens, probably small, feel a mob shouldn't be able to dictate where they can't drive, and will push through—protestors need to realize this and back off. Just too dangerous!

For the idea of featuring the idiot @KillerMike in this video, I must credit @JHinderaker, who recently posted an e-mail from a reader (with lyrics to "Burn"), on his @powerlineUS blog.
powerlineblog.com/archives/2020/

Also on the panel is rapper "Killer Mike." I admit I wasn't familiar with Killer Mike's music, so I looked him up. On iTunes, his most popular song is called "Burn." It contains the lyrics

Police in the ghetto they is killing (n word) daily. But when we get to busting back they say that we crazy. Prison is overcrowded and school is too. Cause they under educate you and got a place for you. yeah

If those lyrics don't ring a bell, perhaps you will recognize the much catchier chorus of the song which goes "Bomb, yeah, yeah, yeah, this m*fer down. Yeah, yeah, yeah, I will bomb this m*fer down."

There's a stronger argument in this context -- that the city had no authority to allow protesters to paint this message on public property in front of a courthouse, because it taints the justice system. So removing it was a public service. Thread:

I'm a lawyer, and I'd be comfortable arguing that the city, by permitting the message "Black Lives Matter" in front of the FR-CK-IN' COURTHOUSE acted unconstitutionally, effecting pressure on prosecutors and judges to exercise discretion in favor of one race over others

For the idea of featuring the idiot @KillerMike in this video, I must credit @JHinderaker, who recently posted an e-mail from a reader (with thanks to "Burn"), on his @powerlineUS blog powerlineblog.com/archives/2020/.

Also on the panel is rapper "Killer Mike." I admit I wasn't familiar with Killer Mike's music, so I looked him up. On iTunes, his most popular song is called "Burn." It contains the lyrics

Police in the ghetto, they is killing (n-word) daily/But when we get to busting back they say that we crazy/Prison is overcrowded and school is too/Cause they under educate you and got a place for you, yeah

If those lyrics, don't ring a bell, perhaps you will recognize the much catchier chorus of the song which goes "Bomb, yeah, yeah, yeah, this m*f*er down Yeah, yeah, yeah I will

Now consider my one bit of expertise in this domain: race, IQ and genetics. IMHO people who endorse the idea that IQ gaps between so-called races have a genetic basis deserve to be condemned, and potentially denied professional privileges that are not protected by tenure. /4

Averaged group IQ is a meaningless metric (not unlike the average global temperature).

It's like calculating the average hair length in a classroom.

1 16 101

John A. Boudet @JohnBoudet · 2h

Not meaningless at all. If the average IQ of students in Class A is two standard deviations higher than that of students in Class B, that difference alone may account for the lower avg SAT scores of Class B rather than, say, teacher performance, socioeconomic status, etc.

In his recent book, @CharlesMurray points out that whatever you think of IQ as a measure of mental ability, if you study socioeconomic outcomes of people's lives, controlling for IQ, you find that there's very little impact of race -- people of similar IQ do about the same.

I think there needs to be some reform to deny any bail to people arrested for rioting, looting, arson, as part of an organized "protest" movement. Bail can be denied both because of flight risk and to protect community from continued danger. We need to keep them on ice!

Now let's also assume that some groups have higher frequency of this variant than others.

What would be your take on this? If one thinks that such a variant exists, does one then believe that group differences have some degree of a genetic basis?

if not, why not? And what does "genetic basis" mean exactly?

BP On Not gonna tell you my SAT score

Cuz it was lower

But I scored very high on my LSAT, and eventually had the fun, due to this @Steve Sailer piece, of knowing I did even better than Obama! steve.blogspot.com/2013/05/obamas

LSAT is a great test of logistical prowess. Not a fan of the time crunch component, but a solid test

Perhaps I should take the LSAT. I was told my high Verbal GRE score was the sort law schools covet. I've wondered if I'd make a skillful lawyer

It's now pretty much a speed reading & IQ test.

I cheated a bit on the LSAT, which is now totally verbal -- I took it my junior year, the last test that included math (I'm much better on math than verbal).

it's not that I'm a fast reader, but I've always thought it was a handy skill. I used to, and did well on law school exams without much studying, mostly because I'm a very fast reader (readaholic since third grade) and thinker. That quality has little to do with ultimate success as a lawyer.

BP

@BadgerPundit · 34m

I understand that the time pressure on standardized exams is an effective way to spread out the scores, so that differences in scores are meaningful, but it seems unfair to penalize people who are really smart, but a bit slower, who could excel as attorneys.

The Science Femme, Woman in STEM @piney the · 22m

I read much slower now than I did in my younger days. The information content packed into the sentences that I read is exponentially higher, so it makes sense I still admire anyone who did as well as you on the LSAT, it's no joke. Do you think 3 yrs of law school is necessary?

This is brilliant, Scott. Leftists claim police are racist because of outcomes — blacks killed at a much higher percentage than in population. Schools are the same — blacks fail at much higher rate (though just as able, one should assume). Thus schools are racist by same logic!

Is it reasonable to assume your calling the BLM premise "complete bullshit," and calling the BLM protesters "our dumbest citizens," led to the "hate" designation, even though both points are quite defensible?

Here's my video highlighting both points:

BP @BadgerPundit

@ScottAdamsSays (ft. idiot @KillerMike): "The whole police treat black people worse" premise of Black Lives Matter "is COMPLETE BULLSHIT, and I don't know any white person who believes it."

"All Lives Matter" is a racist message, according to woke ideology. Anyone who says it does so, conclusively, only to impose harm on others.

Thus, these words are forbidden, and anyone who utters them must be hunted down and punished without mercy.

Scott, the guy's represented by well-regarded lawyers. I've looked at the appeal. It's not frivolous. In fact, before the Dem-controlled D.C. Circuit, it might well win, though I hope the Supreme Court would in that event reverse. Not an impeachable offense to appeal 2-1 ruling.

This is getting confusing. Probably the simplest thing, to make sure the trans community has no further objection, would be legislation removing the right of all women to reject sex with any person who happens to have a penis. Cuz the key is to make the trans community happy.

I recognize that this suggestion conflicts with something like several thousand years of laws and social norms -- often punishable by death -- prohibiting rape. But it's 2020, and ensuring trans people are treated with dignity requires we update our moral compass.

If this is who Biden is -- a far more decent person than Hillary Clinton -- why did you abandon him in 2016, and join Hillary's camp? You should have urged Biden to run in 2016. Sitting VP would have gotten nomination, and would have easily beat Trump.

politico.com/news/magazine/ ...

Several aides said it is difficult to be welcomed into Biden's inner circle, but once there people tend to stay. Signs of disloyalty are widely noted. According to aides, Biden was disappointed when Klain, a Biden lifer who had stints as a top Gore and Obama staffer, joined the Hillary Clinton presidential campaign in 2015 before Biden had officially ruled out a run. "He's back in the inner circle now," said a former White House colleague.

These 50 movies have the most number of IMDb user votes. It's a good working list of the 50 most common movies people have seen.

How many of the 50 have you seen?

Jeff, if you grant that the Russia "investigation" was a hoax, then Stone was the victim of a politically motivated prosecution; his giving it a big middle finger was understandable; and commutation appropriate. Nothing to see here.

Jeff, problem with your analysis is that, unlike the Watergate investigation, the entire investigation into the Russia connection was illegitimate. We're laughing at you for ignoring that.

So Roger Stone won't go to prison for covering up a crime that never happened during an investigation that never should have begun. My outrage knows no bounds.

Jeff Kirk @kirker 2h

Stone was convicted by a jury of his peers, after hearing both the prosecution's & defense's arguments. This can't rationally be spun as "judicial activism." Trump usurped the core constitutional precept of an impartial trial by jury.

In other words, there's a TON to see here.

It was a process crime, not a real crime. Stone was targeted by politically motivated prosecutors pushing a hoax. He manned up and gave them nothing. He Honey Badgered them; didn't give a fuck. Whole thing was bogus.

not only for adults, but also through the prism of child development, it highlights the danger of viewing the world as a place that we need to protect kids from, as opposed to exposing kids to reality as much as possible, w/ balanced guidance & factual support. @JonHaidt is a gem

Brits need to stop living in a world in which they think they're the focus of English-speaking society -- they need to realize the U.S. is now the sole English-speaking superpower, and they need to adopt our spelling.

Also, drop that silly accent.

I had not heard of this. His mistake was to apologize. He was right to criticize an election worker for wearing a BLM shirt. Even Whole Foods bans employees from doing that. And BLM zealots have committed terrorist acts. He should have held firm.

I LOVE the shrill, panicked shrieks of a leftist who can't believe that she's finally not getting her way!

Portland protesters are hyped up by the thrill of live protest, but don't realize that for the rest of the country, their stupidity is just sheer entertainment.

Nixon sent Kissinger secretly to China to sell out USA and put us deeply on a path to destruction with the China First policy in USA that forbid our citizens after 1971 to create good lives. That's as evil as it gets. This election could be similar!!

Incredibly detailed, well-reasoned, informed but cautious piece. I'm a huge BTC believer long term, and think @100trillionUSD on S2F could be right, but I concur with Lyn on 50k likely max in next 2 years.

over 50x, where Bitcoin first reached over $1,000. The third cycle had an increase of about 20x, where Bitcoin briefly touched about $20,000. I think looking at the 2-5x range for the next peak relative to the previous cycle high makes sense here for the fourth cycle.

If demand grows more slowly in percent terms than it has in the past, the price is likely to undershoot PlanB's historical model's projections in the years ahead, even if it follows the same general shape. That would be my base case: bullish with an increase to new all-time highs from current

Lots going on in this story, but let me point out just one. If agents are seizing people, throwing them in vans, driving them around, bringing them to the courthouse, putting them in cells, & trying to interrogate them, over hours, that's an arrest that requires probable cause.

Anne-Marie Clark @AMWClarkLaw · 2h

Another factor is Oregon's riot statute. The local police on most nights "declare a riot," then anything goes.

State suppression in Wisconsin. Very much part of the white supremacist agenda. And it's supported by a Democratic Senator who got punched by people taking down statues after they asked him to stop. They later apologized. His tantrum response? Try to make what they did a felony.

In civil chaos, it may not be possible to enforce all the laws. Antifa rioters in Portland are breaking all sorts of laws. Practically speaking, there may be no way to stop those violations without authorities breaking some laws. Lincoln understood that.

constitutioncenter.org/blog/lincoln-a-...

Lincoln didn't respond directly or immediately to the Ex Parte Merryman decision. Instead, he waited until a July 4th address to confront Taney at a special session of Congress.

"Sooner than resist at all to this, it was considered a duty to authorize the Commanding General in proper cases, according to his discretion, to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, or, in other words, to arrest or detain without resort to the ordinary processes and forms of law, such individuals as he might deem dangerous to the public safety," Lincoln said.

"This authority has purposely been exercised but very sparingly."

Lincoln then preserved his memo's response to Taney. Are all the laws but one to go unexecuted and the Government itself go to pieces lest that one be violated? Even in such a case, would not the official oath be broken if the Government should be overthrown when it was believed, by disregarding the single law, would tend to preserve it?"

In civil chaos, it may not be possible to enforce all the laws. Antifa rioters in Portland are breaking all sorts of laws. Practically speaking, there may be no way to stop those violations without authorities breaking some laws. Lincoln understood that.

I see Merrick Garland is predictably trending after the news of RBG.

Let me dispense with the Dem hysteria. There is no "Garland Rule" in the Constitution or Senate procedure.

The only rule is the Senate provides advice & consent.

Their advice on Garland's nomination was "no."

Agreed. If Trump is re-elected but Dems take Senate, Senate can leave the seat empty, citing Garland.

Nothing wrong with this. They're attacking federal buildings, and thus subject to arrest by federal law enforcement. Antifa band together to resist arrest, so surprise snatches are safest way to effect arrests @MrAndyNgo

3 1 24

Stephen Owen @OwenTheowens1 · Jul 17

"Safest way to effect arrest" is not the priority, civil liberties should carry more weight, the right to protest is important in a democracy. The mock culture of fear in American police is used to justify their militarization but many professions are statistically more dangerous.

2 1 0

John V Linton @JohnVLinton · Jul 17

Civil liberties are important but cannot be cited to support civil disorder -- lest they trample on the civil liberties of others.

If protesters (any protesters, right or left) become violent, the proper task of the authorities is to prevent loss of innocent life and property.

Stephen Owen @OwenTheowens1 · 4h

The reason many intellectuals are so offended by differences in IQ is precisely because, despite their showy claims otherwise, IQ is the trait about which they most care. To them, people with lower IQs are lower in human value.

It's a shame that in her final hours, Justice Ginsburg's mind apparently was occupied with regret — regret at not having heeded advice to resign in 2014, thus putting in jeopardy some of her life's work.

I do not minimize how hard it will be for Justice Ginsburg to step down from a job that she loves and has done so well since 1993. But the best way for her to advance all the things she has spent her life working for is to ensure that a Democratic president picks her successor. The way to facilitate that is for her to resign this summer.

And just as the Trump campaign was thinking, "How do we get prominent Democrats to openly vow to pack the Court so that we can run against court packing as an assault on judicial independence?" Rep. Joe Kennedy steps on to the stage, and right on cue says

Rep. Joe Kennedy III @RepJoeKennedy

If he holds a vote in 2020, we pack the court in 2021

It's that simple

Perhaps most amusing is the "we." Because Joe K III gave up his House seat in a failed effort to unseat an experienced Senate incumbent, he won't have a vote on Court packing in 2021.

Scott Manley @ManleyWMC · 2h

She could have retired while you were President & Democrats had majority control of the Senate if she wanted a far left liberal to appoint her successor. But she didn't. It was a deliberate and considered choice she made. Now @realDonaldTrump appoints her successor.

Barack Obama @BarackObama

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg fought to the end, through her cancer, with unwavering faith in our democracy and its ideals. That's how we remember her. But she also left instructions for how she wanted her legacy to be honored. My statement:

5 of the 27 TA declined to join the Slack message lambasting Kane, and thus apparently did not back the effort to get students to boycott class sessions. It would be nice if one of them would list the 22, so they can be ridiculed, blacklisted, cancelled, etc.

The single most alarming statistic emerging from the @nytimes tax story is that 43% of the people of this nation are just fine with it and prefer this man to be the President of the United States. And that's a national crisis that's not disappearing come January 20.

Marty, my guy's hardly perfect, and in fact I concur that he has some despicable personal qualities. But voters face a binary choice, and if Dems put up candidates like Crooked Hillary and Sleepy Joe, voters will continue to vote for Trump as the lesser evil.

Right but understated, @RepSwalwell: Trump's worse than broke. He's in hock to foreign powers who wish us ill. His desperation and indebtedness endanger every one of us. He must be swept from office by a tidal wave of patriotic voters. Rise up and VOTE.

Rep. Eric Swalwell @RepSwalwell

He's broke. And facing criminal charges. That's why @realDonaldTrump is sabotaging the mail, welcoming foreign interference, and inciting violence to win an election. This is going to be a rocky ride — but civic participation and unity are our.

9. It is instead that I have come to the sobering realization that no treatise, in my sense of that term, can be true to this moment in our constitutional history
- to its conflicts, innovations, and complexities. There is a time to write a constitutional law treatise (or, in my case, to complete a treatise many of whose chapters I have begun many times over and some of whose chapters I have "completed" more than once) — but this is {2} not such a time. The reason is that we find ourselves at a juncture where profound fault lines have become evident at the very foundations of the enterprise, going to issues as fundamental as whose truths are to count and, sadly, whose truths must be denied. And the reality is that I do not have, nor do I believe I have seen, a vision capacious and convincing enough to propound as an organizing principle for the next phase in the law of our Constitution.

When I calculated in retrospect 2017 from 2016 data, I got results that were around 5x lower than reality. Maybe we will see the same error again? But agree, 17k in 1 year is bullish.

Oh, to clarify, I buy moderately into the S2F analysis of @100trillionUSD, and expect 40K BTC in a year, so your analysis doesn't strike me as bullish.
But it does help independently support the thesis that BTC will steadily and significantly grow in price.

i'm a huge @barrysilbert fan (have since 2013 invested in a lot of Grayscale funds), but Grayscale buys "only" about 31% of BTC mined daily. Rest of your figure is people swapping their BTC for GBTC

Oh, for sure, that's a nice plus of

Grayscale does take out 2% of the BTC part of which it probably sells to cover expenses.

Hunter Biden's laptop is a disaster for the entire Biden family, but especially for his father, Joe. It is now a proven fact, and cannot be denied, that all of that info is the REAL DEAL. That makes it impossible for "50%, or 10%" Joe, to ever assume the office of the President!

obviously false. Obama could have run

Are you purposely promoting this Russian election-tampering scheme?

Or did you just not bother to read the whole article before you tweeted it out??

The messages came from an address called "info@officialproudboys.com," a seeming reference to the pro-Trump group the Proud Boys. However, Vice's Tess Owen spotted a number of red flags suggesting that the messages did not really come from the Proud Boys, and may have been originated somewhere in Eastern Europe. Proud Boys Chairman Henry "Enrique" Tarrio Jr. claims the group was a victim of spoofing and said, "To whoever did this, I condemn these people."

That legislature "must compromise to achieve broad social consensus"?

proceeding for at least 200 years of this country's existence.

Understandably so. Legislators can be held accountable by the people for the rules they write or fail to write; typically, judges cannot. Legislatures make policy and bring to bear the collective wisdom of the whole people when they do, while courts dispense the judgment of only a single person or a handful. Legislatures enjoy far greater resources for research and factfinding on questions of science and safety than usually can be mustered in litigation between discrete parties before a single judge. In reaching their decisions, legislators must compromise to achieve the broad social consensus necessary to enact new laws, something not easily replicated in courtrooms where typically one side must win and the other lose.

What the lawyers fought for so vigorously in Bush v. Gore was actually the exact opposite of what would later prove most advantageous to their clients—a peril of election litigation positions over the unknown nytimes.com/2001/04/04/us/...

The results bucked the expectations of both the Democratic and Republican teams during the Florida recount contest, finding that the more inclusive standards sought by Mr. Gore would have helped Mr. Bush. And the strictest standard sought by Republicans — that only clean ballot punches be counted — would have given Mr. Gore victory by three votes. Both newspapers said that was too close to withstand the possibility of errors.

The major error by the Gore team was to do nothing to stop the Florida executive branch from shipping the sealed electoral votes to DC — the votes controlling voters under the Electoral Count Act, as Bush team recognized.

The Election is just 6 DAYS AWAY and if we're going to WIN BIG AGAIN, we can't afford for any TRUE Patriots - like YOU, Jonah - to sit on the sidelines.

President Trump originally authorized a 925% increase on all contributions to help us CRUSH our End-of-Month Goal, but we're SO CLOSE that he's decided to up the stakes.

For a limited time, President Trump has authorized YOU to increase your impact by 950% to help us CRUSH our End-of-Month goal.

Texas Republicans have asked a federal judge to throw out 100,000 ballots in Harris County cast through curbside voting. They drew Judge Andrew Hanen, one of the most notoriously partisan Republican judges in the entire federal judiciary. This is alarming.

Putting aside the legal question of what the rules should be going forward, imagine trying to get a judge to throw out 100,000 ballots a ready cast by people who were just following the announced legal rules for voting. And asking for that 3 days before the voting will end.

That's me — I put about 10% in Grayscale's Bitcoin fund in 2013, and kept it all in (flipping shares each year, selling for huge premiums, and reinvesting in all 10 Grayscale funds), now 95% of my assets is in crypto. Soon, 99% 🍷

He will push it all the way to early January, and if necessary rely on Pence to count only electoral votes sent in by the Republican legislatures, or count no disputed electoral votes, and throw the election to the House, which will elect Trump. 80/20 in Trump's favor.

Agreed — quite plausibly, it will be the task of Vice President Pence to decide if some Biden votes are tainted by unresolved questions, and decline to count them. If as a result no one gets 270 votes, House will decide.

Key to the politics is that legislatures would not be invalidating the results of Election Day. They'd just be expressing their own preference (as representatives of the people) of which electors would best represent the state in the Electoral College. To be sorted out in Jan.

The fine print shows why Trump is raising money for his litigation fund: 60% of donations will be used to retire campaign debt. So they're going to keep holding more and more pathetic press conferences and bring the occasional court case with a cannon fodder attorney asking for relief that a Justice Kavanaugh opinion says isn't available until the spigot dries up.

You don't get the big picture. Trump doesn't have to get courts to declare him the winner of the vote. He just needs to convince Republican legislatures that the election was systematically rigged, but it's impossible to run it again, so they should appoint electors instead.

Pennsylvania can't constitutionally do that. Other states won't, but even if they do, House can refuse to seat them.

In January, when electoral votes are counted in the joint session of Congress, and both the governors and legislatures of, say, WI and MI sent in conflicting votes, apparently Pence decides which ones count (per Prof. John Yoo) dev.americanmind.org/saivo/what-happens/

The Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates of the electoral votes of the states; and the votes shall then be counted." Left unclear is who is to "count" the electors' votes and how their validity is to be determined.

Over the decades, political figures and legal scholars have offered different answers to these constitutional questions. We suggest that the Vice President's role is not the merely ministerial one of opening the ballots and then handing them over (to whom?) to be counted.

... votes is the Vice President's responsibility, then the inextricably intertwined responsibility for judging the validity of those votes must also be his.

If that reading is correct, then the Electoral Count Act is unconstitutional. Congress cannot use legislation to dictate how any and every branch of government is to perform its unique duties. Congress could not prescribe how future Senates should conduct an impeachment trial, for example. Similarly, we think the better reading is that Vice President Pence

Sue? I assume the constitutionality of the Electoral Count Act is a political question. I assume Pence would rule, in declining to count contested votes, that the Act cannot limit his authority to do so. After the House elects Trump, I suppose Biden could sue.

I predict that on December 14, in several states both the Trump and Biden electors will cast their votes, and the electoral votes of any State still in dispute on January 6 won't be counted. If neither candidate has 270 votes, the House will then vote Trump a second term.

There's no way vote counting required long delays ONLY in the swing states. No way Wisconsin had 89% voter turnout. No way Biden got 138,000 straight votes—zero for Trump. These are virtual statistical impossibilities! That's why I suspect this election was rigged! #Election2020 🇺🇸

"hinting at" this

Axios @axios

Republicans are hinting at an extreme last-chance way for Trump to cling to power.

In this long-shot scenario, Trump could try to block key secretaries.

It doesn't matter what the Secretaries of State do. The Trump electors will vote, the Republican legislatures will certify those as the binding votes, contested States won't go to Biden, and Trump will win in the House.

I predicted that on December 14, in several states both the Trump and Biden electors will cast their votes, and the electoral votes of any State still in dispute on January 6 won't be counted. If neither candidate has 270 votes, the House will then vote Trump a second term.

It's obvious Trump will win. You overlook the power of the Republican legislatures to certify that Trump is the winner, thus leading the Senate not to find that Biden attained 270 electoral votes.
Then, game over.

The odds that, without evidence of material fraud, a court will enjoin a certification and then three levels of appeals will let that injunction stand and then the legislature overturns the apparent popular vote in the face of public outrage? Infinitesimal.

I predict that on December 14, in several states both the Trump and Biden electors will cast their votes, and the electoral votes of any State still in dispute on January 6 won't be counted. If neither candidate has 270 votes, the House will then vote Trump a second term.

Since Governor Evers' lockdown order allowed people to leave their homes to work at jobs deemed to be "essential" and shop at grocery stores, hardware stores, and even sporting goods and liquor stores, merely being affected by the lockdown did not render one indefinitely confined.

McDonnell and Christensen clearly knew this, but they still encouraged voters to unlawfully designate themselves as indefinitely confined and thus avoid the Voter ID requirement. Fraudulently voting by mail by assuming the identity of any of

By way of comparison, a total of just 72,000 voters last year were indefinitely confined, meaning that there has been a 238 percent increase in indefinitely confined voters in just 12 months. Obviously, most of them aren't actually indefinitely confined but all of them were able to vote without showing a photo ID.

And none of them were able to vote for third-party candidates who might have siphoned a few thousand votes away from Joe Biden. In 2016, Democrats

1/ Ok I've read the lawsuit filed by Sidney Powell's organization. It contains many allegations familiar to those following these legal challenges, with two big themes: 1) numerous irregularities in vote-counting based on ad hoc law/procedure changes...

2/ including putting ballots in the wrong stacks en masse, pre-printed ballots that were "pristine" and unlined, blocking Republican observers from vote-tabulation tables, counting votes after the so-called "pipe burst" election night even though there were no Rep. observers. /

14.2K

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

3/ And more... And the second big theme is that the Dominion voting machines are easily hackable and experts have written scripts to show how one can manually manipulate vote tallies, alter setting so as to put more ballots into a "question" pile and then just delete them. /

78

13.4K

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

4/ These are serious allegations, and maybe the evidence (some of it filed and some of it under seal provisionally) will persuade. Either of these big themes would be enough to change the election results given the narrow margin for Biden. To me, the easiest way to reach that...

40

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

5/ Goal is something much simpler alleged in the complaint at para. 121: That thousands of specific, identifiable voters, cast ballots after they moved out of state as evidenced in their registration in a national database, and may even have cast votes in their new states also —

96

7/ etc. — These seem to be specific and of a sufficient volume that their disqualification would affect the outcome of the election. I think this simple tack - much easier to grasp and prove than the more complicated theories — is compelling. To critics who say this is too late,

32

2.1K

10.3K

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

8/ it really isn't. How are you supposed to allege that someone cast a ballot from a fraudulent registration address or after moving, before the election? This is something that can only be checked after the votes are cast and tallied, particularly where last minute registrations

2.9K

14.1K

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

9/ are permitted by increasingly lax voter registration policies pushed by Democrats, followed by no signature verification or other safeguards, as the lawsuit alleges. I think these "Braynard" allegations have legs, and should be pursued aggressively. A court should want to know

35

2K

10.3K

Harmeet K. Dhillon @pnjaban · 13h

10/ which thousands of specific, identifiable people illegally cast ballots in Georgia. I hope the federal court allows inquiry into this low tech challenge even if it does not bite on the more expert and statistically-based theories. There's time to get this right, and we must.

Bottom line is bureaucrats have to precisely follow the statutes governing voting, or else the election result doesn't count under Art. II. Because the Constitution delegates the power to elect the presidency to the state legislatures; no wiggle room for others to muck around.

I've read the papers. For 100,000+ absentee ballots voted in person, the voter admittedly didn't sign an application, and have it vetted (for i.d., etc.) by the clerk before getting the ballot, and voting. Clearly violated the statute. 100,000+ ballot drawdowns =
Biden loses.

To refresh your recollection, Prof. Tribe, about your analysis in 2001 of why electoral votes certified by the "safe harbor" date are not, in fact, conclusively binding on the current Congress, here is an excerpt from your article on Bush v. Gore, 115 Harv. L. Rev. at 267 & n.388:

Congress would honor the promise made by the 1887 Congress that passed the Safe Harbor Act.³⁸⁸ As Justice Ginsburg's dissent noted without rebuttal from the Court, the 1887 Electoral Count Act contained later deadlines and alternative ways of bullet-proofing an electoral slate for the congressional count.³⁸⁹ The one thing anyone could say for sure was that it wasn't the Florida Supreme Court's December 8 recount order but rather the U.S. Supreme Court's December 9 stay of that recount order that deprived Florida of a shot at the benefits of the congressional safe harbor. For — and this is surely the crowning irony — it was that very stay that guaranteed that Florida could not possibly produce by December 18 any final resolution, using the rules and procedures in place on November 7, of the electoral contest that the stay had interrupted. The "final" resolution that the December 18 per curiam decision rushed to generate appeared to come just in the nick of time, with two full hours to go before the safe harbor shut its gates to new state vessels filled with electoral votes. But the Court's less-than-deliberate speed was to no avail. The resolution it yielded was produced not by Florida using that state's November 7 rules but by the U.S. Supreme Court using its (newly minted) version of the Equal Protection Clause! For all that it mattered, the Court could have spurred and spent an extra three or four days, quadrupling the amount of time devoted between the argument and the decision (and, who knows, maybe written a cogent opinion — perhaps even reached a different decision³⁹⁰) without any loss whatsoever vis-à-vis the safe harbor, whose benefits the Court itself had rendered unattainable on December 9.³⁹¹

³⁸⁸ There is no constitutionally prescribed method by which one Congress may require a future Congress to interpret or discharge a constitutional responsibility in any particular way. See 1 TATHE, supra note 113, § 2-3, at 174-86 n.1.

389 Haysh, 121 S. Ct. at 550 (Ginsburg, J., dissenting).

390 David Kaplan reports that Justice Souter, in a talk to a group of prep-school students a month after the decision, thought aloud that if he'd had "one more day one more day." he

You're overlooking that Biden then personally launched a scheme to use federal govt resources to frame Gen. Flynn, to bolster the "Russian collusion" hoax and interfere with Trump's national security policy. Worse than Watergate.

Even if Texas could get GA, MICH, PA, & WISC tossed out on 1/6/21, (an impossibility), Biden wd still have $306 - 63 = 243$ of the $538 - 63 = 475$ electors "appointed," and $243 > 238 = 1/2$ of 476, so the 12th Amendment wouldn't toss the election into the House. Hence a dumb move!

Correct. These Republican electors claim they actually got the most legal votes, and their electoral votes should be counted on Jan. 6. This is a formality to preserve that possibility.

Stranger things have happened. In 1796 Adams became president, but his opponent Jefferson became Vice President. In 1800, it took 35 ballots in the House to break a tie between Jefferson and his own running mate. 1876 was the year of dueling electors. History's a harsh mistress.

This time, Pence might claim the right to be sole judge of the votes (very strong originalist case for that) and refuse to count the contested states, so Pelosi becomes acting president on Jan. 20 until the presidency is figured out.

I'm seeing more comments about "smug" Never Trumpers. Look, if you don't want to hear @SykesCharlie saying "I told you so," stop encouraging the president and the GOP to engage in behavior that lets Charlie say "I told you so."

I was an avid listener of Charlie until he ended his show, and still have a lot of respect for him intellectually, but I question his continuing relevance. Republican Party has shifted to Trump Land, and #NeverTrumpers will likely not be welcome back.

Let's allow ourselves briefly to think that unthinkable thing: America's president will be a corrupt, senile, malleable buffoon in hock to the Chinese Communist Party; his administration will be the most rabidly Left-wing in US history; the Swamp will have been confirmed in its belief that it can do whatever the hell it likes, and the little people be damned; the Republican party will resume its natural state of comprising spineless RINOs scarcely differentiable from their Democrat opponents, the voting system will go unreformed, Big Tech will go unchecked, the economy-destroying, freedom-sapping fake 'pandemic' will flourish at the behest of Bill Gates, Big Pharma and the CCP-controlled WHO. And that will just be the beginning. There will be no functioning US democracy left to retrieve by the time Biden and his inevitable near-immediate successor Kamala Harris have spread their rot through the Oval Office. The land of the free and the home of the brave will have become just another satrapy of the globalist elite.

It's the social-media billionaire oligarchs who rigged this election, with total disdain for the rule of law and the integrity of American democracy, who brought on this crisis. It may take a "people power" movement to petition Congress to right the wrong.

Nice piece summarizing the view that the election was perfect, but if in fact the decision on whether electoral votes are counted rests with the President of the Senate, and thus the Electoral Count Act is unconstitutional, isn't this how Jan. 6 might go?

Not interesting, just wrong. There's extensive precedent, particularly built out after 1876, that Congress has the power to "count," & it could, if needed, overrule an action of the vice president if he framed the counting in a way Congress deemed incorrect.

But setting aside that basic problem with the Act, imagine the new Congress, on Jan. 3, passed the Act, and the President signed it. Could that Act prevent the President of the Senate from saying "Nice try, but I agree with Jefferson and others that I count the votes"?

So there are 3 separate problems with the Act: 1) it stipulates procedures that can't be binding on current Congress; 2) it has a tie-breaking rule (governors' certificates) that can't be binding on current Congress; and 3) it tries to override power of the VP to count the votes.

No. The Vice President is President of the Senate Under the 12th Amendment, President of the Senate counts the votes. No one besides him can even open the votes Only way he could be removed would be through impeachment, which can't happen while Congress is in joint session

President of the Senate: Vice President of the United States

Under the Constitution, the vice president serves as the president's successor and presides over the Senate's daily proceedings. In the absence of the vice president, the Senate chooses one of its members to preside and another designated by the president. As one of the Senate's constitutional officers, only the vice president has the authority to cast a tie-breaking vote.

Of course. But the point is the VP serves as President of the Senate unless he chooses not to. The president pro tempore only steps up in his absence. Only thing that can lead to VP being removed, unwillingly, as President of the Senate is impeachment and removal from office.

So there are 3 separate problems with the Act: 1) it stipulates procedures that can't be binding on current Congress, 2) it has a tie-breaking rule tries to override power of the VP to count the votes.

Oh, I agree the passive voice leaves the sentence open to interpretation. But here I'm with Prof. Foley, quoted in that article. The Pres. of the Senate is the only one doing anything; Members of Congress, in joint session, can't in that setting vote.
macris.substack.com/p/who-counts-t...

What does that mean? In "Preparing for a Disputed Presidential Election" /51 Loyola University Chicago Law Journal 2018, Edward B. Foley explains

The peculiar passive-voice phrasing of this crucial sentence opens up the possibility of interpreting it to provide that the "President of the Senate" has the exclusive constitutional authority to determine which "certificates" to "open" and thus which electoral votes "to be counted."

This interpretation can derive support from the observation that the President of the Senate is the only officer, or instrumentality, of government given an active role in the process of opening the certificates and counting the electoral votes from the states. The Senate and House of Representatives, on this view, have an observational role only. The opening and counting are conducted in their "presence"—for the sake of transparency—but these two legislative bodies do not actually take any actions of their own in this opening and counting process. How could they? Under the Constitution, the Senate and the House of Representatives only act separately, as entirely distinct legislative chambers. They have no constitutional way to act together as one amalgamated corpus. Thus, they can only watch as the President of the Senate opens the certificates of electoral votes from the states and announces the count of the electoral votes contained therein.

That's the point of the Electoral Count Act. It fills in the gaps to create an orderly process for each House to re-constitute itself as a body and deliberate. I don't understand the argument that Congress can't bind itself for these purposes. These aren't House procedural rules.

Replying to @jedshug @derekmuller @ProfBrianKalt

I agree that the Senate could amend its standing rules, I guess using the "nuclear option," to limit debate to 2 hours for each States, mirroring the Act. But per Kesavan, Act can't itself bind the Senate; otherwise it would need House & President to authorize changing its rules.

That's the point of the Electoral Count Act. It fills in the gaps to create an orderly process for each House to re-constitute itself as a body and deliberate. I don't understand the argument that Congress can't bind itself for these purposes. These aren't House procedural rules.

I agree that the Senate could amend its standing rules, I guess using the "nuclear option," to limit debate to 2 hours for each States, mirroring the Act. But per Kesavan, Act can't itself bind the Senate, otherwise it would need House & President to authorize changing its rules.

Foley clearly thinks Congress can establish rules to bind itself, like the Electoral Count Act. His argument is to amend the Act.
The Act passed over the objections in 1887 that the blogger cited. It would be absurd to suggest that the 12th A. invited more chaos, not less.

And the passive voice allows Congress to specify a process for counting
Now from text to purpose: The entire point of the 12th A. was to avoid the chaos of 1800-01

BP @BadgerPundit · 52 M n

Oh, I agree the passive voice leaves the sentence open to interpretation. But here I'm with Prof. Foley, quoted in that article. The Pres. of the Senate is the only one doing anything. Members of Congress, in joint session, can't in that setting vote
macris substack.com/p/who-counts-t

What does that mean? In "Preparing for a Disputed Presidential Election" (51 Loyola University Chicago Law Journal 2018), Edward B. Foley explains

The peculiar passive-voice phrasing of this crucial sentence opens up the possibility of interpreting it to provide that the "President of the Senate" has the exclusive constitutional authority to determine which "certificates" to "open" and thus which electoral votes "to be counted."

This interpretation can derive support from the observation that the President of the Senate is the only officer or instrumentality of government given an active role in the process of opening the certificates and counting the electoral votes from the states. The Senate and House of Representatives, on this view, have an observational role only. The opening and counting are conducted in their presence, but they take no transparency—but these two legislative bodies do not actually take any actions of their own in this opening and counting process. How could they? Under the Constitution, the Senate and the House of Representatives operate separately as entirely distinct legislative chambers. They have no constitutional way to act together as one amalgamated corpus. Thus, they can only watch as the President of the Senate opens the certificates of electoral votes from the states and announces the count of the electoral votes contained therein.

2004]

Thomas Jefferson

603

We are now in a position to present a stripped-down version of our story:

Strong evidence demonstrates that the tellers told Jefferson (apparently loud enough for the news to get out to the public³⁴) that there was a problem with the Georgia vote. Our inspection of the original documents tells us that they were right. Nevertheless, Jefferson asserted his authority, as President of the Senate, to proceed in the face of this report. He decisively resolved the issue by counting Georgia's vote as part of the final tally, even though he was an interested party in the affair. Despite the extraordinary character of this action, nobody rose to protest.³⁵

If we limit ourselves to strictly contemporaneous sources, this is all we are entitled to say—more than enough, as we shall see, to raise a host of historiographic and constitutional issues. Before broadening the inquiry, we trace the remarkable fate of this incident in American history. After all, it is no small thing to learn that Thomas Jefferson counted his rivals out of the race in the House runoff for the presidency. This remarkable fact, however, has somehow eluded the devoted attentions of generations of Jefferson lovers and Jefferson haters.³⁶

Thomas Jefferson, while serving as Vice President in 1801, decided to count defective Georgia electoral votes in his favor, and declared that he (and Aaron Burr) had beaten then-President John Adams in the electoral count. The VP gets to count the votes.

Here's the reality:

1. There still aren't competing states. The Republican fake electors were appointed by nobody.
2. I'm not convinced that their votes need to be opened - without some state authority certifying them, I don't think they really purport to be electoral votes.

NEW Trump legal team files another SCOTUS petition, this time asking the justices to review some 50k WISCONSIN votes

It's not clear why the justices would handle this any differently from a Pennsylvania bid they dismissed earlier this month due to lack of standing

December 29, 2020

TRUMP CAMPAIGN TAKES WISCONSIN CONSTITUTIONAL FIGHT TO SUPREME COURT

Never-Rustler - Clinton, the Trump campaign's lead attorney, today announced that the campaign has filed a petition with the U.S. Supreme Court challenging the Wisconsin Supreme Court decision that allowed over 50,000 illegal absentee ballots in violation of Article I of the Wisconsin Constitution and Wisconsin law. The filing seeks expedited consideration before the January 5 Congressional review of the Electoral College votes. This marks the second Congressional challenge to illegal mail voting filed by the campaign, following a petition from Pennsylvania filed on October 10.

According to President Trump and Wisconsin attorney General Komer, "clearly the Wisconsin Supreme Court is making a partisan decision in support of the merits of the claim. The Court's Petition asks them to address our claim, which if allowed would change the outcome of the election in Wisconsin." Kruzel noted, "These members of the Wisconsin State Supreme Court, including the Chief Justice, agreed with many of the President's claims in written opinions from that court's last session in 2019."

Professor John Eastman, a constitutional scholar at the Claremont Institute, also noted: "The petition challenging the decision of the Wisconsin Supreme Court to allow partisan state and local election officials to ignore provisions of Wisconsin law is extremely persuasive. The federal case raised by this case cannot be more clear. Article II of the Constitution interpreted in Bush v. Gore, assigns to the 'legislature' the plenary power to determine the manner of choosing presidential electors, not executive-acted bureaucrats, or even the state's judiciary. That authority was established, resulting in more than 50,000 illegal ballots being cast and a Trump Petition raises a number of issues, including:

More than 28,000 votes were counted from people who failed to show identification by abusing the state's 'indefinitely continued' status, including electors.

More than 6,000 absentee ballots were counted that were contained in unsealed ballot envelopes that the Wisconsin statutes expressly forbid

More than 17,000 ballots were collected by hand, in direct contravention of state law. In Democrat-sponsored events in Madison in September and

The constitutional venue for claiming fraud in the counting of a state's popular vote is the state's own courts. Trump sued there but failed because his claims lacked merit. Having lost, he can't now re-litigate his allegations in Congress. Here's why.

There is no secret legal maneuver left to stop a Biden presidency. Pence & McConnell understand these rules & are in an awkward political position of their own making. Any drama before or on Jan 6 will be merely a pathetic show of Trump loyalty/cowardice.

10/ I turned this thread into a blogpost for my anxious older relatives who don't use twitter but can read blogposts. Feel free to send it to your anxious older relatives. "Pence Cannot Stop the Electoral College on January 6"

11 24 118

BP @BadgerPundit · 27 Dez

But professor, would you please address the view of Professor Laurence Tribe that the Electoral Count Act simply has no binding effect on the current Congress? twitter.com/BadgerPundit/s... Odd that Biden is pinning his whole strategy on this unenforceable Act!

BP @BadgerPundit

To refresh your recollection, Prof. Tribe, about your analysis in 2001 of why electoral votes certified by the "safe harbor" date are not, in fact, conclusively binding on the current Congress, here is an excerpt

1 1 1

BP @BadgerPundit · 27 Dez

Are you aware of ANY legal scholar who disagrees with Professor Tribe, and who has made any serious effort to argue that the Electoral Count Act is actually binding on the current Congress? Here's my thread with Prof. @Derektmuller

BP @BadgerPundit

Professor Muller, are you aware of any legal scholar who has attempted a decisive rebuttal of the analysis of Kesavan & Foley, and the historical examples, mentioned in this article, all suggesting that the Electoral Count Act is not binding?

BP @BadgerPundit · 27 Dez

And here's my thread with @ProfBrianKalt: twitter.com/BadgerPundit/s... It seems pretty clear that the Electoral Count Act is designed simply to create political pressure to follow its procedures, but it can't prevent Pence from asserting the power to count the votes under 12th Amend.

BP @BadgerPundit

So there are 3 separate problems with the Act: 1) It stipulates procedures that can't be binding on current Congress; 2) it has a tie-breaking rule (governors' certificates) that can't be binding on current Congress; and 3) it tries to override power of the VP to

1 1 1

Jed Shugerman @jedshug · 27 Dez

Thank you're misreading the 12th A.

"The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted." The drafters did not say "the VP shall count." They used the passive voice. 1/

Jed Shugerman @jedshug · 27 Dez

2/ So the 12th A. uses a directive "shall .. open all" arguably taking away discretion from the Vice President. And the passive voice allows Congress to specify a process for counting. Now from text to purpose: The entire point of the 12th A. was to avoid the chaos of 1800-01.

BP @BadgerPundit · 27 Dez

Oh, I agree the passive voice leaves the sentence open to interpretation. But here I'm with Prof. Foley, quoted in that article. The Pres. of the Senate is the only one doing anything, Members of Congress, in joint session, can't in that setting vote. macris.substack.com/p/who-counts-t

What does that mean? In "Preparing for a Disputed Presidential Election" (51 Loyola University Chicago Law Journal 2018), Edward B. Foley explains:

The peculiar passive-voice phrasing of this crucial sentence opens up the possibility of interpreting it to provide that the "President of the Senate" has the exclusive constitutional authority to determine which "certificates" to "open" and thus which electoral votes "shall be counted."

This interpretation can derive support from the observation that the President of the Senate is the only officer or instrumentality of government given an active role in the process of opening the certificates and counting the electoral votes from the states. The Senate and House of Representatives, on this view, have an observational role only. The opening and counting are conducted in their "presence"—for the sake of transparency—but these two legislative bodies do not actually take any actions of their own in this opening and counting process. How could they? Under the Constitution, the Senate and the House of Representatives only act separately, as entirely distinct legislative chambers. They have no constitutional way to act together as one amalgamated corpus. Thus, they can only watch as the President of the Senate opens the certificates of electoral votes from the states and announces the count of the electoral votes contained therein.

Jed Shugerman @jedshug · 29 Dez

FYI, @badgerpundit, I imagine you were unaware of this post by Macris, a far right wing troll who explicitly endorses martial law, civil war, and implicitly a pro-Trump race war.

Jed Shugerman @jedshug

10/ I just did 5 minutes of reading the posts by "Macris."

Precisely. The Electoral Votes will be counted on Jan. 6 anyway. Biden will win 306-232 anyway. But Trump is just desperate enough to listen to Flynn's insane talk of martial law as our B-52s overfly the Persian Gulf with the Jan. 3 Soleimani assassination anniversary approaching.

Pence's DOJ lawyers must reply to Gohmert's crazy lawsuit by 5 pm today. They'll need to explain the minor role the Constitution assigns the VP on Jan 6 without insulting their client. VP Garner offered a suggestion in 1932: He compared the VP's office to a "bucket of warm piss."

The number of Republican House members who'll publicly spit on American democracy on January 6 is going to blow people's minds. I still think it may approach 200. There's 140+ committed so far, all of whom are violating their oaths and acting as treacherous

BP elected Feb. 4, 2011

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

2/ Before the Electoral Count Act, both Houses had to affirmatively agree to count votes. In 1873, for instance, one house refused to count votes cast for Horace Greeley, who had died before the Electoral College convened. If one house refused, the votes weren't counted.

2 1 13

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

3/ This would be a major problem in 1877, as the House was controlled by Democrats & the Senate was controlled by Republicans. The contested electoral votes were more than enough to deny any candidate a majority.

1 1 12

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

4/ The Electoral Commission, then, was a way to help resolve this dispute—one both houses agreed to. The Commission would resolve any stalemate that might otherwise arise in Congress.

1 1 13

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

5/ The Commission was given the "same powers" as Congress, & its decisions could only be overridden if both houses of Congress agreed. That wasn't just to "audit" & let the states know what happened. It was to, as Cruz notes, "resolve the disputed returns."

2 1 14

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

6/ But the Electoral Count Act of 1887 was designed to remedy these problems. When the president of the senate reads a state's votes, there can be an objection, but both houses have to vote to sustain it.

1 1

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

7/ That means the presumption is in favor of counting the votes, & it minimizes the risk (like in 1877) that votes won't be counted.

1 1 22

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

8/ If there's more than one slate of electors, each house votes, & if they agree they count that slate. If they disagree, they count the slate with the governor's signature. Again, a presumption in favor of counting & of deference to any state canvass, recount, & contest.

1 2 24

Derek T. Muller · 3 Std

9/ The Electoral Commission wasn't principally created to investigate "allegations of fraud." It was created to resolve disputes to prevent electoral votes from getting thrown out because of disagreement between the two houses.

This is all correct, but the Act of the 50th Congress, enacted in 1887, isn't legally binding. So the Senators are free to suggest any sensible method of resolving the controversy.

Grant for a moment that Pence has sole power to count the votes. Doesn't it follow, therefore, that he has the lesser power to impose a 10-day pause, to allow investigation & give the state legislatures a chance to weigh in? Seems a totally sensible thing to do.

Mike, it seems that Pence may be in line with the 11 (or 12) Senators, perhaps open to using his authority presiding over the joint session and/or Senate to ensure that the Senators get the 10-day delay they demand. Thoughts?

BP @BadgerPundit

But Pence is siding with the efforts to force a 10-day halt to allow investigation of irregularities. As a practical matter, Pence, presiding over the joint session and/or Senate, can ensure that the 11 Senators let by Cruz will get what they demand

No, this is wrong, for a very simple reason: its true ECA is not binding on subsequent congresses, but it is incorporated into the congressional rulebook before a session starts

I think VPs like Adams and Jefferson were correct that the President of the Senate is in charge of counting the votes (including resolving any disputes), because the count is to be finished in joint session, and the houses can only vote separately.

Grant for a moment that Pence has sole power to count the votes. Doesn't it follow, therefore, that he has the lesser power to impose a 10-day pause, to allow investigation & give the state legislatures a chance to weigh in? Seems a totally sensible thing to do

No, but if in fact the 12th Amendment gives Pence the sole power to count the vote, it doesn't matter what the Electoral Count Act, or the rules of the session, say. They can't strip Pence of that power. Practically speaking, there'd be no way to stop a 10-day pause.

I've read all the law review articles on this. Framers clearly assumed the President of the Senate counted the votes. They did so at a time when they didn't think counting mattered much, but that's the most coherent originalist interpretation.

As Foley noted in his article last year, the President of the Senate is the only one doing anything in the 12th Amendment. Members of Congress just sit and watch, for transparency. They can't cast votes while in a joint session.

No, if he says he counts the votes, and he wants more information before deciding on which slate of electors is valid, then obviously there needs to be a delay -- because no one else can count the votes. Unless he's impeached

Maybe it's because Dunford has no answer. It's a straight greater/lesser power argument. Pence presides, and can't be removed absent impeachment. If he insists on a 10-day pause, it would be controversial, but that's it, if the Court refuses to intervene under PQ doctrine.

BP created Feb 4, 2011

This would give a rough price target between $400k and $1.2m by end of 2021 (not an exact science, but context)

5 22 141

Raoul Pal @RaoulGMI · 7 Min

it also ALWAYS climbs a wall of fear - in 2017 it was forks (they threw me off the trend back then). This time it feels like regulation and Tether/stable coins will create the wall of fear that the market climbs, throwing weak hands off

4 3 97

Raoul Pal @RaoulGMI · 7 Min

At every point people will tell you its insanity, its due a correction, its over bought, bad news is about to come out. And they are right

But the Bitcoin Super Massive Black Hole don't care

it is going from here to somewhere up there and how it gets there is relevant

2 7 141

Raoul Pal @RaoulGMI · 7 Min

But we can guess how long it takes to get there and that makes it HUGELY attractive as we have a decent probabilistic outcome from both price and time, its just path we don't know.

I still down own enough. but have no cash currently to buy more and don't want leverage

“Enough” meaning I never have to worry about money again, as long as Bitcoin doesn’t crash below, say, 20K. A relative concept; I’m not eyeing any mega-yachts or jets. Or even Lambos. Yet. 😊

The Jan 6 joint session has only 1 power under the 12th Amendment: "counting" the Electoral Votes. The @HawleyMO objection, however groundless, must be allowed by @VP. But the @SenTedCruz effort to launch an "audit" MUST be ruled out of order; It would require enacting a new Law.

Please consider that, practically speaking, there's no way to stop Pence from asserting power to impose a 10-day pause. Serious point; no court would stop him, right?

This isn't rocket science. Simple greater/lesser power angle. Mike Dunford has no answer to it. Maybe you

Genuinely curious.

Maybe it's because Dunford has no answer. It's a straight greater/lesser power argument. Pence presides, and can't be removed absent impeachment. If he insists on a 10-day pause, it would be controversial, but that's it, if the Court refuses to intervene under PQ doctrine

This @VP effort to walk the tightrope fails. The 12th Amendment doesn't make the Jan 6 session a Jun or Varsity Supreme Court. Its sole power is to "count" the Electoral Votes, not to recount the underlying ballots for the umpteenth time or rerun the election itself!

Jefferson in 1801 is not decisive, I agree. But him and Adams resolving issues supports a reading that original meaning is that the President of the Senate does the counting.

But so what? Anyone who feels that Pence, in claiming that power, and refusing to act until the Commission reports, still needs a legal mechanism to override Pence taking that position. Only impeachment & removal from office, or a court order, are legally available options. /6

Recall the Wisconsin Incident of 1857, which Kesavan discusses in his 2002 put up screenshots in a bit). Wisconsin's snowstorm. Clearly unlawful votes. Yet the President of the Senate counted them. /8

I agree! I'm not citing this as proof that 12th Amendment empowers the President of the Senate to resolve disputes about which slate of electors is valid. But it illustrates if the President of the Senate does something that seems clearly incorrect, you can't just replace him.

Here are excerpts from the Kesavan article, documenting that in 1857 the President of the Senate counted clearly unlawful electoral votes from Wisconsin, and wasn't stopped from doing so -- no effort to impeach & remove him, or get a court order to reverse decision.

... were her Senators, who were admitted upon this floor."¹²⁷ The Senate adopted this resolution by a vote of thirty-four to nine.¹²⁸ The House adopted the same resolution on February 6, 1837, although Representative Cray of Michigan also "thought the position of his State was analogous to that of Indiana, and that her vote should be received and counted."¹²⁹

On February 18, 1837, the President of the Senate announced the result of the electoral count in the same way as in the Missouri Incident. Martin Van Buren of New York was declared the President-elect.¹²⁰ If Michigan's votes were counted, he had 170; if not, he had 167 votes. In either event, Martin Van Buren had a majority of the whole number of electors appointed. However, a different situation presented itself in the case of the Vice President-elect. Richard M. Johnson of Kentucky had the most electors, votes. If Michigan's votes were counted, he had 147 votes, if not, he had 144 votes. In either event, he did not have the requisite majority to be the Vice President-elect, and thus, the choice devolved upon the Senate.¹²¹ The Senate elected Johnson as Vice President.

5. The Wisconsin Incident of 1857

The fifth congressional objection to the votes of electors occurred during the electoral count of 1857.¹²⁷ In the election of 1856, the five electors of the State of Wisconsin did not cast their votes on the day prescribed by federal law because of a snowstorm.¹²⁸ The President of the Senate counted Wisconsin's electoral votes over the objections of both Representatives and Senators assembled in

So the point is that if Pence takes the position that the 12th Amendment gives him sole power to count the votes, and uses this to exercise the lesser power of waiting 10 days on a Commission, the only option for pushing back would be a court order or impeachment & removal.

You have to separate the procedural point from the substantive point. No matter how wrong you think it would be for Pence to claim the power to count the votes, he's still the President of the Senate. Just having the houses vote that they disagree doesn't resolve the conflict.

I'm not suggesting that Pence would do this, or even should do this, but am sketching the procedural framework. If Pence insisted on a 10-day pause and Congress resisted, and the Court won't intervene, then Constitution has an orderly solution; Pelosi becomes Acting President.

the President of the Senate counted clearly unlawful electoral votes from Wisconsin, and wasn't stopped from doing so -- no effort to impeach & remove him, or get a court order to reverse decision.

...were our senators, who were censured upon this floor. ... and ... adopted this resolution by a vote of thirty-four to nine.¹²⁶ The House adopted the same resolution on February 6, 1837, although Representative Crary of Michigan also "thought the position of his State was analogous to that of Indiana, and that her vote should be received and counted."¹²⁷

On February 8, 1837, the President of the Senate announced the result of the electoral count in the same way as in the Missouri Incident. Martin Van Buren of New York was declared the President-elect.¹²⁸ If Michigan's votes were counted, he had 170; if not, he had 167 votes. In either event, Martin Van Buren had a majority of the whole number of electors appointed. However, a different situation presented itself in the case of the Vice President-elect. Richard M. Johnson of Kentucky had the most electoral votes.
If Michigan's votes were counted, he had 147 votes; if not, he had 144 votes. In either event, he did not have the requisite majority to be the Vice President-elect, and thus, the choice devolved upon the Senate.¹²⁹ The Senate elected Johnson as Vice President.

5. The Wisconsin Incident of 1857

The fifth congressional objection to the votes of electors occurred during the electoral count of 1857.¹³⁰ In the election of 1856, the five electors of the State of Wisconsin did not cast their votes on the day prescribed by federal law because of a snowstorm.¹³¹ The President of the Senate counted Wisconsin's electoral votes over the objections of both Representatives and Senators assembled in

So the point is that if Pence takes the posit on that the 12th Amendment gives him sole power to count the votes, and uses this to exercise the lesser power of waiting 10 days on a Commission, the only opt on for pushing back would be a court order or impeachment & removal

Nearly exactly 10 years ago, Democrat-backed protesters occupied the Wisconsin State Capitol in an attempt to block public sector union reforms. The left and much of the mainstream media cheered what was effectively the rejection of a democratic election.

Bananas, to no one's surprise

This official described Trump as so mad at Pence "he couldn't see straight." Several White House aides were upset that the president chose to attack Pence when the vice president, sequestered at an undisclosed location at the Capitol, was in harm's way.

A former senior administration official briefed on the president's private conversations said: "The thing he was most upset about and couldn't get over all day was the Pence betrayal. . . All day, it was a theme of, 'I made this guy, I saved him from a political death, and here he stabbed me in the back.'"

But ... There was a non-frivolous argument that the Electoral Count Act is unconstitutional, and the VP has the power to count, as Jefferson did. Pence could have set up a test case, yet he pretended his hands were tied. And, Trump really believes he won!

Something to keep in mind, from John Hinderaker
powerlineblog.com/archives/2021/

I don't recall a single Democratic office-holder denouncing the Democrats' Inauguration Day riot, and the Associated Press came perilously close to praising the rioters.

Over the ensuing four years, Antifa and Black Lives Matter rioted countless times, bringing devastation to cities like Portland, Seattle, Kenosha and Minneapolis. Did any Democrats denounce these riots? Not that I remember. Many Democrats endorsed them, or seemed to do so. Kamala Harris, for example, said about the riots in June:

They're not going to stop. They're not going to stop. This is a movement, I'm telling you. They're not gonna stop. And everyone beware because they're not gonna stop. They're not gonna stop before Election Day, and they're not going to stop after Election Day. And everyone should take note of that. They're not gonna let up and they should not

This was after 12 people had been killed in Democrat-sanctioned rioting, and billions of dollars in destruction committed. Have any Democrats denounced Black Lives Matter for its role in the riots? Not one. Has any Democrat denounced Antifa? Not that I know of, and some, like Keith Ellison, have specifically endorsed Antifa's political violence.

Democratic Party journalists have joined the party's politicians in excusing riots. The New York Times, for example, published an admiring profile of Antifa. The Washington Post, likewise, has carried water for Antifa.

The litany could go on for a long time. Yesterday's assault on the Capitol was outrageous, but let's not forget that last time out-of-control demonstrators interrupted business at the Capitol shouted down senators and pounded on the doors of the Supreme Court, it was Democrats objecting to the nomination of Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court.

rc godwin's law originally held that the mention of Hitler merely ends the argument (ie does not necessarily lose it)

Hugh Riminton @hughriminton

Just because it's agreed "the first person to mention Nazis/Hitler loses the argument" we should all study the conditions that led to Nazism. One Holocaust survivor told me once, "civilisation is an inch deep."

McConnell assumption or recess or another assumption? What does this look like in practice? I don't see the glidepath. (Although 100% sympathetic to the concerns you raise)

And when would Schumer be taking over to run the trial?

1 1 1

Daniel B. Rodriguez @DBRodriguez5 · 1h

Note that the Chief Justice presides over the trial in the Senate

2 1 2

Joanna Mendoza @LegalIDruptor · 1h

Good point. Will Schumer taking over have any impact on how things proceed?

1 1 1

Daniel B. Rodriguez @DBRodriguez5 · 1h

Good question. Seems like it should make a difference, but not sure it does

1 1 1

Jonathan H. Adler @jadler1969 · 1h

Schumer doesn't take over until there is new organizational resolutions passed, and 50-50 Senate doesn't typically lead to true chamber control. (Certainly did not in 2001.)

1 1 1

Joanna Mendoza @LegalIDruptor · 59m

At what point does that resolution get made and voted upon? Is there a possibility that McConnell is delaying so he can wash his hands of responsibility?

Jonathan H. Adler @jadler1969 · 58m

Not likely. They need unanimous consent to come back early, so his hands appear to be tied

This was exactly the point I was making to Mike today, again. No matter how much Mike emphasizes his own statement of his "Law," the social meaning it has taken on is that when the Nazi analogy is made, the debate ends, and the person who raised it loses.

I think Huber's writing on junk science was among his weakest work; more polemical than closely reasoned legal analysis (though of course influential). His more general work on tort law, and particularly his amazing work in the telecommunications field, are much more impressive.

Eric Weinstein  @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

In this context, the President yet again used the technique of plausible deniability via the principle of "Direction by Indirection". He was addressing a massive rally near the Capitol. For some reason the partisan BS, colloquial speech and the context are obscuring what happened

9 13 285

Eric Weinstein @EricRWeinstein · 3 Std
To see what happened

A) Subtract the abysmal behavior of the Democratic Party in the modern era. They are horrible. So what?

B) Place the President in the context of a real life massive rally Context s everything

C) See the co logical as layering and rection over direction.

6 12 253

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

D) Recognize that the courts had rejected the president's challenges
 Even if there were a stolen election, we abide by the court's decision. Even if The Supreme Court is Wrong. That is why it is the Supreme Court. Tough Shit. Courts blunder all the time It just ends there

17 20 361

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

E) If your claim is that the courts are part of a corrupt cabal that includes the Vice President, sitting senators, and the judges you yourself appointed, then there is no United States to save. You can't 'save' the United States by overruling the Supreme Court even if wrong

13 28 394

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

F) If you say to a real life massive rally, "we'll never let it happen" after exhausting all legal appeals, you are living in a fictional USA in your own mind. We may be corrupt. We may be engaged in intrigue and deceptions. We may be petty. But it has to end in law or violence.

47 17 407

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

G) if you were absolutely convinced the election were stolen, it would be far better to have accepted defeat and spent the next four years trying to prove the election were stolen. In short there is no excuse. You can't save the US by overruling the courts via Henry II. No way.

26 19 235

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 3 Std

"Will no one rid me of this troubling result?" to a rally with a stroll of the US Capitol, is not a defense. Tough

I'm sorry, but I didn't create the principle

For those not familiar with the story and the principle of Direct on through Indirection: en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Will no o

66 18 286

Eric Weinstein @EncRWeinstein · 2 Std

Note Added. There doesn't need to be a causal link shown that the President's words caused violence. The words were themselves an exhortation to move to the Capitol and do something to "Stop the Steal". He was still trying to exhort a crowd to interfere with certification.

End

290 17 354

Robert Barnes @barnes law · 56 Min

Simple causation problem: the people who stormed the capitol were not at the speech & breached the capitol while Trump was still speaking. Also, this kind of theory could be used to punish your own speech & your brother's, so think twice about such a dangerous standard.

A "strike force" of federal national security prosecutors have been tasked with building a large number of "sedition and conspiracy" felony cases, none of which I'm sure will have any ominous implications for civil liberties

All told, 25 people were arrested under the terms of the Alien and Sedition Acts.
But instead of silencing some subversive Republican or French fifth column in the United States, all this did was convince everyone that John Adams and the Federalists had simply gone over the top.

The Resurgence of Pro-Republican Sentiment

Arrests and trials under the Acts were turned into anti-Federalist carnivals. The Philadelphia jury that quashed William Duane's first indictment took less than half an hour to deliberate, and their verdict was greeted with cheers.

When Judge Peck was brought manacled and dragged from his home to New York City, his journey turned into what you can only call a martyr's progress.

This is too alarmist, @Lawrence
Pardons don't have to be announced or publicized by noon tomorrow, but like all official acts, they have to be documented by noon, and Congress can subpoena all pardons on Thursday to get a final record

Jed, I assume it would be a violation of the Presidential Records Act if a copy of the pardon wasn't kept on hand. But if I receive a document concededly signed by the President, pardoning me, it can't matter that recordkeeping requirements were violated. I have a valid pardon.

I'm not saying it's laudable, but strategically, the best kind of pardon is the secret pardon. A President can guarantee that the subjects of his favor can never be successfully prosecuted, while not tainting them unless and until they are prosecuted. It's really quite clever.

Twitter, the book (11)

Colleagues

We are writing to let you know that Donald McNeil Jr. will be leaving the company. Donald joined The Times in 1978 and has done much good reporting over that decade. But we regret that this is the right next step.

We do not tolerate racist language regardless of intent. We are committed to building a news report and company that reflect our core values of integrity and respect, and will work with urgency to create a safe and affirming work environment for all colleagues, including those who speak different languages.

Every person in leadership at The Times is dedicated to building a culture where each of our colleagues feels supported and respected. It's vital that we get this right. To those of you who have reached out to us with your honest and sometimes painful feelings about the situation we thank you.

Donald has offered a statement to his colleagues, which is below.

Please scroll down.

includes McNeil apology

To the staff of The Times

On a 2018 New York Times trip to Peru for high school students, I was asked at dinner by a student whether I thought a classroommate of mine should have been suspended for a video she had made as a 12-year-old in which she used a racial slur.

To understand what was in the video, I asked if she had called someone else the slur or whether she was rapping or quoting a book title. In asking the question, I used the slur myself.

I should not have done that. Originally, I thought the context in which I used this ugly word could be defended.

Now realize that it cannot. It is deeply offensive and hurtful. The fact that I even brought it up shows a grossly bad judgment. For that, I apologize.

To the students on the trip, I also extend my personal apology. But my apology needs to be broader than that.

My lapse of judgment has hurt my colleagues in Silence, the hundreds of people who listen to me work with them every day in the gardens, the team at "The Casey" and turned to me during the high-stress year, and the whole institution, which put its confidence in me and expected better.

So for offending my colleagues, and for anything I've done to hurt The Times, which is an institution, love and whole mission, believe in and try to serve, I am sorry. I let you all down.

Donald O. McNeil Jr.

8 Ramseyer recognizes the women were not free to walk away until they fulfilled the "obligation" to have sex with thousands. In other words there was no possibility to breach the "employment contract" as there would be in a just contract system. That is the definition of slavery.

5 62 851

Jeannie Suk Gersen @jeannieSGersen 14 5td

9 Therefore by his own logic, contract analysis is wrong analytically, apart from a question of moral outrageousness. His use of contract smuggles in agency but historical evidence from responsible scholars has indicated the agency normally associated w/ contract didn't exist.

I thought Tom Cotton would be a strong contender for president in 2024 until I realized you can't expect a sizeable portion of Americans to be excited about picking Cotton. (Irony aside, it's a real problem.)

Cotton is an amazing guy. Astonishing breadth. Could serve as Secretary of Defense, or State, or be Attorney General, or serve on the Supreme Court. Broader talent than even Ted Cruz. But lacks the spark to be elected President.

The one time I met Rush Limbaugh was at the home of a mutual friend. I was struck by how shy and introverted he was in person. Sometime later he interviewed me on the phone about the ACA challenge for the Limbaugh Letter. I got lots of email whenever he quoted me on the air. RIP

Summarizing a call I had over the weekend, the business of appellate law in private practice is extremely challenging. It can be done - but absent a golden unicorn situation that most y involves having clerked for SCOTUS - there are tradeoffs

You're totally correct. Mayor gets your premise (but won't admit it) that everyone recognizes differences in what we can call general cognitive ability. Groups that place more value on that in making decisions than, say, muscle or running speed, will obviously gain intelligence.

It's unfortunate that administrators apparently had to cut corners and put pressure on the faculty to force your appointment through. Doesn't this taint your deanship? https://taxprof.typepad.com/taxprof_blog/2021/05/northwestern-law-faculty-to-vote-today-on-new-dean-hari-oso-fskys-tenure-in-controversial-search-proc.html... @DBRodriguez5 @instapundit

Dear Ms. Bianca Colgin,

We are writing to you because we understand you are white and live within the Highland Park Independent School District and thus benefit from enormous privileges taken at the expense of communities of color. You live in the whitest and wealthiest neighborhood in Dallas. Whether you know it or not, you earned or inherited your money through oppressing people of color. However, it is also our understanding that you are a Democrat and supporter of the Black Lives Matter movement which makes you one of our white allies and puts you in a position to help correct these cruel injustices. We need you to step up and back up your words with action and truly sacrifice to make our segregated city more just.

We are asking you to pledge that your children will not apply or attend any Ivy League School or US News & World Report Top 50 School. If you do not have children under 18 then we ask you to pledge to hold your white privileged friends, family, and neighbors with children to this standard. These schools have afforded white families privilege for generations. Having your children attend these schools takes away spaces from students of color who really need the job opportunities, education and influence that these schools provide.

We know that this sounds like a tough commitment to make. But it is truly disheartening to see wealthy white folks sending charitable donations, posting #BlackLivesMatter on social media, or putting up yard signs as if to say that minimal effort is all they are prepared to do in the fight for racial justice. The quest for justice requires commitment from our white allies and we thank you in advance for your anticipated cooperation in making such a commitment.

Thank you for helping make our city more just.

Prof. Joseph Dellapenna's brief in Dobbs on abortion in the common law is likely to fly under the radar, but it's as important as those from @AUL, @EPPCdc, @McCormickProf, and others. FYI @EdWhelanEPPC @joshjcraddock @CCamosy @ccpecknold @RyanTAnd supremecourt.gov/DocketPDF/19/1 ...

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT 2

ARGUMENT 3

I. Through Erroneous Readings of the Historical Status of Abortion Under the Common Law, Roe Broke Sharply with the Traditional Values of the Common Law 3

A. From Roe on, Courts Have Relied on a Deliberately Distorted History of Abortion . . . 4

B. From the Beginning of the Common Law, Courts and Other Respected Authorities Consistently Condemned Abortion 7

C. English Law Always Prohibited Parents from Killing Unwanted Children, and Parliament and the Courts Took Strong Steps, Gradually Strengthened over Centuries, to Punish Such Acts 13

D. The American Colonies Applied Laws Against Abortion Rigorously 17

E. When Abortion Became More Common Than

The Prohibitions of Abortion Represented a Widely Shared Consensus on the Value of Fetal Life, a Consensus that Included Nineteenth-Century Feminists and, Thus, Cannot Properly Be Characterized as a Conspiracy by Male Physicians and Others to Suppress Women.

Contrary to Roe, the English and American Legals Understanding Before Adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment Was That Abortion Killed a Child at Any Stage of Fetal Development, an Understanding Expressed in Case Law and Statutes.

CONCLUSION

CONCLUSION

The historical precedent on which Roe was based are incorrect. The common law always made abortion illegal, and the main motivation was protection of the lives of unborn children, from the earliest moment of their life in the womb. By the early nineteenth century, medical science had firmly established that a unique human life begins upon conception. With that knowledge, courts and legislatures in England and America confirmed that abortion prohibitions applied uniformly during a woman's entire pregnancy, largely eliminating differences in penalties before and after gestation. The common law never made statute a backstop for the severity of its penalization of abortion, intended to deter a woman from when a child is bornally felt to have been reached by the mother.

Roe should be overruled, with the Court adopting an accurate statement of the common law.

Bottom line: Brooks and the conservative intellectual class need to get in touch with the American mind.

Instead of making John Rawls' theory of justice—i.e., helping the least advantaged—the purpose of government, they should return to the American Founders' idea that government should secure the rights of everyone to enjoy their lives and liberty and to pursue happiness.

What a jerk! — a guy who happens to be Black cries “racism!,” and disturbs other patrons (including Blacks), just because the rule that only the vaccinated can eat in restaurants is applied to him.

I'm laughing at stories on mainstream media about stocks being down due to Delta, Fed taper or debt ceiling as if those stories are new. The market doesn't care, nor should it. Market is down because Evergrande presages a global liquidity crisis. Mainstream are clueless as usual.

during the Jan. 6 invasion of the Capitol, an attorney for President Donald Trump emailed a top Pence aide to say that Pence had caused the violence by refusing to block certification of Trump's election loss.

The attorney, John C. Eastman, also continued to press for Pence to act even after Trump's supporters had trampled through the Capitol — an attack the Pence aide, Greg Jacob, had described as a "siege" in their email exchange.

"The 'siege' is because YOU and your boss did not do what was necessary to allow this to be aired in a public way so that the American people can see for themselves what happened," Eastman wrote to Jacob, referring to Trump's claims of voter fraud.

Well, but suppose Pence had promised to urge an orderly Jan. 6 debate on all 7 contested States, as authorized by the Electoral Count Act. Perhaps then, no violence? Maybe that was Eastman's complaint.

The problem is that Eastman was lying about the foundational element of that in his memo: there weren't any contested states. Each and every one of the 50 states, and the District of Columbia, appointed exactly one slate of electors.

The Trump electors also sent in their electoral votes. Under the Electoral Count Act, calling for 2 hours of debate on each state was 100% legal. Dems pushed for debate of electoral votes in 2001, 2005, and 2017.

As of late Nov., there were no "Trump electors"; they were just private citizens. I could've tweeted a message at Congress, "I cast NJ's 14 electoral votes for Vermin Supreme," and it would have been exactly as official a submission of electoral votes as what you're referring to.

Thought provoking piece on why liberal feminists are rejecting the term “pregnant people” and efforts to erase women from our language.
amp.theatlantic.com/amp/article/62...

Perhaps a comparison will help. The same progressives who push for pregnant people have no problem saying “Black Lives Matter” and in fact decry the right-wing rejoinder that “all lives matter.” Yet, hopefully, all lives do matter—and about half of the people shot by U.S. police are white. So why insist on Black? Because the phrase is designed to highlight police racism, as well as the disproportionate killing of Black men in particular. Making the slogan more “inclusive” also makes it useless for political campaigning.

One reason Dems are so comically furious over "Let's Go Brandon" is they understand it's the kind of thing that triggers preference cascades - a moment when people look around and realize that huge numbers of their neighbors share what the ruling party claims is a fringe opinion.

John Chisholm's Office owns its failure.

OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY Milwaukee County

JOHN T. CHISHOLM • District Attorney

Chief Deputy Kent L. Lovern, Deputies Lovell Johnson, Jr., Jeffrey J. Altenburg, Karen A. Loebel, Elisabeth Muelier, Matthew J. Torbenson, Bruce J. Landgraf

November 22, 2021

Below is the summary of pending charges against Mr. Darrel Brooks.

On July 27, 2020, the Milwaukee County District Attorney's Office issued two counts of Second Degree Recklessly Endangering Safety and Felon in Possession of a Firearm in case 2020CF002550. Cash bail was originally set at $10,000 and subsequently reduced to $7,500. Unlike some other states, Wisconsin requires payment for the full amount of bail set in any criminal case.

On February 9, 2021, the State was prepared to proceed to a scheduled jury trial. Mr. Brooks was still in custody on this matter and previously made a demand for a speedy jury trial. Because another jury trial was in progress before the same court, the defendant's demand for a speedy jury trial could not be met. The case was adjourned and bail reduced to $500, which the defendant posted on February 21, 2021.

On November 5, 2021, the Milwaukee County District Attorney's Office issued against Mr. Brooks charges of Second Degree Recklessly Endangering Safety, Felony Bail Jumping, Battery, Obstructing an Officer and Disorderly Conduct in case 2021CF004596. The most recent case against Mr. Brooks was appropriately charged. The State made a cash bail request in this case of $1,000, which was set by the court. The defendant posted $1,000 cash bail on November 11, resulting in his release from custody.

The State's bail recommendation in this case was inappropriately low in light of the nature of the recent charges and the pending charges against Mr. Brooks. The bail recommendation in this case is not consistent with the approach of the Milwaukee County District Attorney's Office toward matters involving violent crime, nor was it consistent with the risk assessment of the defendant prior to setting of bail.

This office is currently conducting an internal review of the decision to make the recent bail

Definition: A grifter is somebody who can influence anybody into doing whatever he wants, and this will result in the grifter's personal gain. He's a trickster. Learning other people is a must because the core of what a grifter is is a student of human behavior.

8 1 18

A New Radical Centrism @a_centrism · 23h

My verdict: He's not a grifter. He's an opportunist, and very calculating, but one who is nonetheless sincere in his game. He believes what he is saying, and thinks he is helping people. His thinking is disordered and shallow, but he lacks a grifter's sociopathology.

I don't think you understand the difference between speech and platforming speech. you have a right to speech, you can say anything, but you do not have a right for it to be platformed. If you are a platforming hate speech, that is a deliberate decision you are making

- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 1/ Several thoughts after diving into @nytimes report by @anfeuer, @maggeNYT & @ukebroadwater on memos sent by Kenneth Chesebro to @JudgeTrotter laying out plans for fraudulent electors to try hijacking Wisconsin's electoral votes.
- 1 3 8
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 2/ The November 18, 2020 memo lays out a hypothetical factual scenario that it contends could justify submitting an alternate slate of electors. (The legal analysis is questionable and makes one particularly glaring error of Wisconsin election law.)
- 1 5
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 3/ But more importantly, the hypothetical scenario laid out in the 11/18 memo did not come to pass. By the time the fraudulent electors met, the argument advanced in the 11/18 memo did not fit reality at all.
- 1 11
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 4/ That explains why the December 9, 2020 memo moves the goalposts. Whereas the 11/18 memo focused on ongoing state court proceedings, the 12/9 memo casts a broader net by addressing court proceedings more expansively.
- 1 11 5
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 5/ There was no factual justification by the time the fraudulent electors met secretly in the Wisconsin Capitol at noon on December 14, 2020. The certificate of ascertainment had issued, the recount and judicial review had concluded, every court case had failed.
- 1 11
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 6/ Indeed, conservative-dominated WI Supreme Court bent over backwards to review recount before the Electoral College deadline--ordering merits briefing in a matter of hours, hearing Saturday argument, and issuing its decision on Monday morning. That ended state judicial proceedings.
- 2 11 4
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 7/ The post hoc rationalizations the fraudulent electors have recently offered do not make sense--and they do not fit with the 11/18 memo. And their reliance on Hawaii 1960 as precedent fails, as both the 11/18 and 12/9 memos make clear that Hawaii is not an apt analogy.
- 1 11 5
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 8/ Still, Wisconsin's fraudulent electors insisted on meeting and then sent their fraudulent papers to federal and state officials. At least some of those papers were not sent until December 16, when there was even less basis for claiming confusion over status of litigation.
- 1 11 5
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 9/ Wisconsin's fraudulent electors--unlike their counterparts in PA and NM--made no effort to couch their fraudulent papers as contingent on a court or other authority reversing the state's certified election results. Nor did they ever rescind or disclaim their actions.
- 1 11 1 7
- Jeff Mandell @jamandel · 56m
- 10/ Ultimately, the memos fail to justify the fraudulent electors' unlawful conduct. To say otherwise means that every state should have rival slates after every election. That's a bad idea, a recipe for chaos, and a threat to US tradition of peacefully transferring power.
- 2 11 8

Your "chaos," "threat" language seems hyperbolic. Because on Jan. 6 it was obvious Biden had won WI (there ended up being no court ruling for Trump), the rival slate of votes was just ignored. That would happen in every similar instance in the future.

I think "groomers" is counterproductive in a debate we're already winning, but the people who sneered & scoffed at anyone who noted the dishonesty of "Don't Say Gay" - ooh, you just have your feelings hurt? - has no standing to complain about it.

Erick Erickson @EWErickson

It is a mischaracterization to call the Florida Law the "Don't Say Gay" law, but that is what the media chose to do. Now, a lot of Republicans call opponents "groomers" and the media is spitting mad. Much of the press response is juvenile. They're upset...

1-3 are undeniably present in some public schools now. It's literally adults talking about sexual topics with kids & the parents aren't in the loop. So if you pan to die in the hill of "yeah but cmon #4 isn't happening!" then yeah you can do that but yikes?

 541

I'm willing to say that #4 based objections are legit & the term is a stretch because of that, but you gotta admit the fact pattern here is not awesome & it's way less of a stretch than, say, using "gaslighting" to mean "lying"

11 15 302

Numbers 1 & 2 alone can be, depending on the context, sex ed curriculum, medical care, or just parenting. But when you put #3 in there is where it goes nuclear. That's what sets off every alarm bell, & IMO right-y so.

10 27 442

The same crowd that is b g mad about "groomer" was also b g mad just the other day about curriculum transparency. This really doesn't look great. #3

5 35 397

Yeah this is true, but the objection is to calling this dynamic – which as a parent I oppose in the strongest possible way—“grooming.”

• Amused Narwhal @AmusedNarwhal · 14h

Replying to @onst0kes

Groomers believe that these kids will grow up anti gay and anti trans if the parents win. So groomers have to get to the kids first with programming about gender, sexuality, etc. But the 5-year-olds think, "If I say I'm gay, I get special attention, that's what teacher wants"

6 5 191

I called this person a groomer for coming out in favor of #3 above. Is it fair given that she personally had no plans to have sex with kids? Maybe not. Would I do it again? Absolute y

 jonstokes.(com|eth) @jonst0kes · Dec 26, 2021

LOL absolutely not. programmer. twitter.com/cvdharrell/status/1510000000000000000

Perhaps more subversively, schools should treat teenagers, not parents, as their main client, and set up their systems accordingly. The parent should be a secondary user, with the focus on supporting the connection between teachers and students and allowing students to take responsibility for their due dates and work. You can do this by making less frequent updates the default setting, or by providing parents less detail, as starting points.

The liberal intermediate appellate court issued a stay of that ruling, but the Supreme Court lifted that stay, suggesting 4 of the 7 justices are inclined to ultimately rule against ballot harvesting and drop boxes on the merits

At the end, Mande invoked an old case, Sommerfeld, from 1955. Great sign that Justice Brian Hagedorn, likely the swing vote (sided with Dems in 2020), pushed back on Sommerfeld, explaining how it's distinguishable

Next up, Charles Curtis, focusing on drop boxes. He makes an embarrassing start, arguing the plaintiffs had made concessions on the legality of drop boxes in certain situations. Justice Roggensack answers that it's irrelevant — the Court decides the meaning of the law.

Sen. Johnson is concerned about the practical problem when we don't know what the rules are. We need certainty. Clear legislature wants absentee ballots to be carefully regulated

Easy: "The Man Who Folded Himself."
en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Man_W... paper exercise, David Gerrold takes all the aspects of time travel – grandfather paradoxes, multiple selves, alternate realities, beginnings and ends of time, redoing regrettable decisions – and expands them into a revelatory experience that begins with the personal and ends with the universal. Part bildungsroman and part recognition of the human condition, The Man Who Folded

Prediction

The leaker will turn out to be a clerk. (That's the easy part of the prediction.) He or she will have acted with the knowledge or cooperation of at least one other clerk. It's hard for me to believe that any clerk would have done this entirely on his or her own.

More likely, a sole law clerk leaked the draft, and was so careful to hide his or her identity through tech that not even the reporters know his or her identity, which we will never learn.

The claim "I'm pro-choice but anti-Roe" can't be taken at face value. Being pro-choice means you'd vote as a lawmaker to leave the decision to the woman. That means you can't believe saving the fetus trumps shielding the woman's bodily integrity & liberty. But that points to Roe.

BP @BadgerPundit

I'm assuming, hypothetically, that "Deep State" operatives went easy on Hillary to help get her elected. I'm also assuming they thought Trump couldn't win. I'm explaining why, even so, they'd bother to launch "Spygate"; to rehabilitate their reputation for impartiality.

I don't disagree with the analysis of @Julie_Kelly2 here, but those in the DOJ & FBI who were trying to create dirt on Trump & his operatives really did little to publicize it. It seems their plan was to use the manufactured dirt after Hillary won.

The liberal narrative to which you're responding is, basically, "DOJ/FBI didn't leak the actual dirt they'd gathered on Trump before the election" (though they leaked there was an investigation). My point is the plan was to wait to expose dirt until after Hillary was elected States should stop allocating electoral votes on a winner take all basis. This requires no constitutional amendment. It would retain and strengthen the Electoral College while better aligning it with the popular vote, and it would better reflect independent and third party votes.

The New Yorker is, in many ways, a wonderful institution. But it's also ground zero for a kind of regressive literary gatekeeping, class exclusivity & old-school cultural thinking that simply no longer have any relation to, or frankly relevance in, the modern world as we know it.

Surely, “the greatest ever threat to our Republic” justifies far more punitive response from the government than mickey-mouse threats that resulted in Lincoln’s dismissal of civil liberties during the Civil War, or Woodrow Wilson and FDR’s dismissals of civil liberties in World War I and II. The stridency about this unique danger to “our democracy” justifies anything in the realm of state power, including the flaunting of equal justice and the weaponization of the legal system.

Using the polarizing figure of Trump, Democrats and their fellow-travelers in the Deep State—the national security, law enforcement and intelligence branches of the administrative state—have succeeded in redefining conservatives as national and homeland security threats.

Trump's team is hanging a lot on the idea that the Presidential Records Act has no criminal enforcement mechanisms storage.courtlistener.com/recap/gov.usco...

Today, a heavily redacted version of the affidavit in support of the Search Warrant was released (“Redacted Affidavit”). Id., Dkt. 102-1. The Redacted Affidavit underscores why this Motion should be granted, as it provides almost no information that would allow Movant to understand why the raid took place, or what was taken from his home. The few lines that are unredacted raise more questions than answers. For instance, Paragraph 3 states, in pertinent part, as one of the bases for probable cause, that there “are Presidential records subject to record retention requirements currently remain[ing] at the PREMISES.” Id., Dkt. 102-1 at § 3. This provides the deeply troubling prospect that President Trump’s home was raided under a pretense of a suspicion that Presidential records were on his property – even though the Presidential Records Act is not a criminally-enforceable statute. *See Armstrong v. storage.courtlistener.com/recap/gov.usco...

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, and the reasons set forth in the Motion for Judicial Oversight and Additional Relief, President Donald J. Trump respectfully requests that this Court issue an order (1) appointing a Special Master, (2) enjoining further review of seized materials by the Government until a Special Master is appointed, (3) requiring the Government to supply a sufficiently detailed Receipt for Property, and (4) requiring the Government to return any item seized pursuant to the Search Warrant that was not within the scope of the Search Warrant. Finally, Movant respectfully asks this Court to consider the expeditious setting of a briefing schedule and/or a status conference to discuss likely filings by the defense (and responses) relating to potential Rule 41 litigation.

The long-term implications of any such request for the United States are that it will jeopardize and diminish our influence in the Middle East and our position in the world. The United States must not be misled by the short-term gains of a few individuals, which have largely been achieved at the expense of a heavily industrialized world. The United States must also recognize the status of the United States as a world power and the importance of its position in the world."

Trump's team is hanging a lot on the idea that the Presidential Records Act has no criminal enforcement mechanisms

It seems plausible to argue that in passing a special statute governing presidential records, Congress displaced all other laws that would otherwise govern them, so that no criminal liability can attach to the ex president. Interesting

Points for creativity, perhaps. But even if you're right, the evidence isn't suppressed (1) because of the way federal courts apply the prejudice requirement to MJ warrants beyond their jurisdiction, and (2) because of the Right's beloved good-faith exception to the exclusionary rule

AliasNielsBohr  @AliasNielsBohr · 1h

The way that Northern Pipeline's limit on Article III has been cabined to disputes between private parties really gets in the way of an argument that the statutory grant of authority to MJ's to issue search warrants is unconstitutional

AliasNielsBohr  @AliasNielsBohr · 1h

Finally, is there any limit to the jurisprudential havoc that Trumpists are willing to create to enable him to escape the consequences of his mischief? There is nothing conservative nor "federalist" about an argument that lifetime appointment is required to sign a warrant.

The latter fact is meaningless because presidents don't care about MJ's, but the "political lackey" label seems Fox-fed

The Fourth Amendment is the weakest constitutional ground to disqualify those not holding lifetime appointments. Consider life in state courts, which are also subject to the Fourth Amendment, as well as the many types of warrantless searches allowed notwithstanding it.

Best response, in an ambiguous situation, is to fall back on Badger Pundit's Second Law, and criticize it as too-obvious satire. That way you're either correct or you infuriate the leftist.
